Citizens' advisory council given OK

By RICHARD GOLD

CANTON—Over vigorous objections by Trustees Brian Schwall and Jim Poole, the township board passed a resolution Tuesday to establish a second and "ongoing" citizens' advisory council (CAC).

The resolution, drafted by Supervisor Robert Greenstein, passed by 5-2, with Poole and Schwall dissenting.

"This is nothing but a thinly veiled federation of homeowners," commented Poole. "I thought this was going to be a nonpolitical group, but the way you have constructed it, you will be drawing people from special interest groups."

Schwall said, "The character and resultant advisory council of this resolution is totally contradictory to the spirit and notion of a citizens' advisory council. Manipulation and power are words used well (to describe this). I think you have totally emasculated the concept of the CAC."

Both trustees were referring to Greenstein's method for appointment to the CAC. The supervisor's resolution said membership would come from and represent homeowner groups. Nominations would be made by the civic organizations. The board would either veto or approve each nominee. Only one representative would be allowed per subdivision, regardless of population.

A group of interested citizens had met for several months earlier this year to draft a recommendation on the composition, goals and purpose of the CAC. They suggested representatives on the advisory body be picked from voting precincts or census districts.

Poole favored that suggestion and added, "Not everyone belongs to a homeowner group. They are representative of only certain interests. What about the people who don't like the homeowner groups? I know plenty of them. What happens when you get more and more subdivisions and homeowner groups? There's no upper limit on the membership of this group. It could get to be mighty unwieldy."

Greenstein replied, "The first duty of this group after they assemble is to look at their membership and see what areas are lacking representation. They will report on this immediately to the board, and remedial action will be taken."

Windsor Park Civic Association President Betty Hamman commented, "I think you are leaving this council open to manipulation by the board. I think a precinct arrangement would be much better and I think the nominations should not have to be approved by the board."

Trustee Jerry Cheske responded, "Can I manipulate you? Furthermore, as a board member I would not want to give up the right to approve appointments. All appointments in this township are made by the board. We shouldn't give up that right here."

The supervisor added, "Those are the most idiotic comments I've heard. They're stupid. A representative of a homeowner group, with some backing, is going to be harder to manipulate than a single individual not representing any particular organization."

Greenstein said the board would have to approve all nominations because the CAC would be receiving township money to study problems assigned to it by the board. Without board sanction, he said, the money would not be obtainable.

Schwall objected to Greenstein's resolution on other grounds. He said the fact that township board requests would be given priority by the CAC (as stipulated in the resolution) could be used to prevent the advisory body from investigating matters it assigned itself. "You'll have to excuse me," said the trustee, "but I am looking for the worst here. The board could over

Local politicians are speculating on 1976 U.S. Senate contest

By STEVE BARNABY

If Democratic Sen. Philip Hart decides to retire in 1976, the local political scene could be affected dramatically.

Although the senatorial race still is more than a year away, political pundits are taking temperatures to see who wants to move where if U.S. Rep. William Ford (D-Taylor) decides to take the plunge for a seat in the upper house. Ford's district includes Westland, Garden City and Canton Township.

Hart has expressed boredom, discontent and frustration to friends after serving 17 years in the Senate. Ford, who is acting and dressing more and more like a senator every day, still is dodging the question publicly. But privately, his aides affirm that he is seriously thinking about entering the contest.

In Ford's favor is the support of the AFL-CIO, which has been a backer of Hart for years.

IN WESTLAND, State Sen. William Faust (D-Westland) and Mayor Eugene McKinney would have a stake in Ford's decision to run.

Faust is one of those rare persons in the politically factionalized area who is loved by just about everybody. In past years he has threatened to challenge Ford, but has been fended off by party officials promising better things in the future.

Again, Faust publicly laughs off the speculation, but he is looking for aides whose expertise deals in areas outside of state interests.

Rumblings around Westland City

Hall are that McKinney is considering a shot at Faust's seat. Since becoming mayor, McKinney has surrounded himself with able young men, well-versed in a variety of areas.

Much of McKinney's decision depends on who will be his opponent in this year's mayoral race and who is elected city council president. To keep politically alive, McKinney must run for reelection, which means he would leave in the middle of a term if elected to the State Senate.

The city charter stipulates that the council president would then become mayor. If a political enemy, such as Glenn Shaw, is in that position, McKinney probably would think twice of running for state office.

Westland's chief executive is genuinely proud of what he has done while in the mayor's seat and would be reluctant to give the position up to what he refers to as the "old order." McKinney is a well-known political enemy of State Rep. Tom Brown (D-Westland), who was Westland's first mayor.

Presently, a draft Brown for mayor campaign is rumbling through the area on the heels of the announcement by Councilman Henry Lundquist that he is withdrawing from politics completely. Lundquist was considering a race against McKinney.

Not to be forgotten is County Commissioner Tom Taylor (D-Westland), who wouldn't mind a chance at the mayoral position or a seat in either of the state houses. But it is rumored that Taylor has lost much of his political support in the area because of an unspecified incident.

IN GARDEN CITY, Councilman Tim Murphy is looking around for a full-time political job after the city's charter commission opted for a city manager instead of a full-time mayor.

Murphy has had county and state aspirations. Ford's move could be encouragement enough for him to run for County Commission or State Senate. Although not as well liked as Faust, Murphy does have political connections in Westland which could prove beneficial.

On the Republican side of the roster, State Sen. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth) could be encouraged to run for Congressional seat in the second district if Marv Esch (R-Ann Arbor) decides to run for Hart's position. Esch has a great deal of support among state Republicans and Pursell is looking around since losing out to James Damman for the lieutenant governor's position.

Airport expansion supported

By RICHARD GOLD

CANTON—The future of Mettetal Airport is more uncertain than ever. The owners, faced with rising taxes and subsidized competition from municipal facilities, say the airport is no longer a viable private enterprise.

The one solution—purchase of the property by Canton Township—is in doubt. Although a financial feasibility report indicated the township could purchase the airport, homeowner opposition to the venture has been heavy.

The issue will come to a head May 28 in the Plymouth Canton High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. when the township administration will conduct a public hearing on the matter.

But while homeowners are busy rallying support against the airport, pilots and businessmen, whose livelihood depends on continuance of the facility, will be marshalling forces.

The homeowners, led by residents in the Pickwick Farms and Pickwick Village subdivisions contend purchase of the airport will lead to expansion—a situation they find untenable. They say expansion will pose safety hazards and environmental problems. They claim the airport is a bad financial risk with township tax dollars, and that the money could be better spent on municipal services.

Businessmen and pilots, however, contend that the airport is a necessity to the economic well being of the township. They believe it will help attract industrial tax base and prevent businesses already in the area from leaving.

"You wouldn't believe how many times plants are kept open because of Mettetal," said Ken Spencer, an executive designer at Ford Motor Company. Spencer, an avid aviator, has used Mettetal for years. "People who are not flyers don't understand how important an airport is," he commented. "And once you lose it, it's gone for good. They don't have any idea how hard it is to zone land for an airport. There's no way they could get another airport if Mettetal goes under."

Tom Carmody, president of C.F. Sales Company in Canton uses the airport for business. He commented, "Very few people experience flight, but it affects each and every one of our lives daily. Consider the number of men who flew in the service who learned to fly at Mettetal, the men who fly our jet liners and who fly for our sheriff's department and other law enforcement agencies who learned here."

He added, "Consider the amount of commerce in the automotive, food, computer, construction, and engineering fields that goes on every day at Mettetal."

Carmody said the airport would be extremely valuable in times of disaster or emergency. "There's an awful lot of communities trying to get airports, and here we are, willing to let this one go," he commented. Spencer said, "Expansion and use of the airport would be governed by the people of the city or township. Look at Ann Arbor. They say nothing over 12,500 pounds can land there. That's not a federal regulation, that's one the city made."

Both Spencer and Carmody said the petitions township residents are signing are misleading. "The facts the homeowners have gathered are wrong. It's one thing to be against the 'Cleanup month' projects abound

CANTON—"Cleanup Month" has hit the halfway point and according to township officials, there is plenty of work left for interested civic organizations and residents.

Last Saturday, May 10, members of the Northwest Canton Homeowner's Association, assisted by scouts, students, and township officers, picked up 15 cubic yards of trash.

"WE HAD TWO complete dump truck loads, and we filled up three pickups," commented John Cojei, one of the cleanup effort organizers. He added, "We had half a load of Christmas trees we picked up on Joy Road alone. After we were done you could hardly recognize Joy, it had been a real dump."

According to Cojei, the cleanup workers covered "90 per cent" of the northwest area, which is bounded by Canton Center on the east, Napier on the west, Joy on the north, and Warren on the south.

The 35 workers covered all roads but Canton Center, Napier and Ford. "They were the most heavily traveled," said Cojei, "and we thought it might be too dangerous." He added that the AAA supplied orange vests for the workers who "covered 23 walking miles."

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS have undertaken projects. The Pilgrim Garden Club is planting "Forget-Me-Nots" at the township offices, while residents of the Fellows Creek subdivision, and Bedford Villas Condominiums are cleaning up sections of Willow and Fellows creeks.

According to township officers, the Jaycees and Lions are also contemplating projects.

Township officials have made a list of 11 areas in need of cleaning, and are directing interested organizations to those locations. They are: fields between Lilley and Morton Taylor, north of Warren; Haggerty Road between Joy and Warren; Centennial Educational Park grounds along Canton Center; school board property on the east side of Canton Center, and on the west side of Haggerty near Cherry Hill.

OTHER SUGGESTED locations are: vacant property on Saratoga (off of Lilley) between Hanford and Warren; vacant property along Foxthorn between Lilley and Morton Taylor; Haggerty Road, south of Cherry Hill near Canton Commons; the west side of Sheldon Road between Cherry Hill and Palmer; Sheldon between Ford and Cherry Hill; and vacant property located between 3339 and 3335 Canton Center.

"If we can get interested citizens," said Supervisor Robert Greenstein, "we will help with trucks. We have all the equipment and facilities, but we need the labor."

The township is supplying a bin north of the fire station on Canton Center during May, and Denski's Dump at Lilley and Michigan Avenue is allowing residents to unload trash free of charge on Wednesdays and Saturdays for the rest of the month.

Mary Dumas asks for more attention to juvenile crime

Wayne County Commissioner Mary E. Dumas wants the federal government to pay more heed to juvenile delinquency in mapping proposals for dealing with the crime problem.

"All too often, today's juvenile delinquent becomes tomorrow's adult offender because existing programs for dealing with their problems are too few and underfunded," she told two national crime study groups last week.

MRS. DUMAS (R-Livonia) joined fellow members of the National Association of Counties' crime and public safety steering committee in a Friday meeting at St. Louis, Mo., after testifying earlier before Sen. Birch Bayh's crime study committee hearing in Washington, D.C.

The steering committee will review the federal Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act in detail and develop recommendations for changes and improvements, she said.

Juveniles account for nearly half the arrests for serious crimes, Mrs. Dumas told the Bayh committee.

"In Wayne County last year there were 27,245 arrests for serious crimes, including murder, rape, robbery, assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft."

States, counties and cities do not have sufficient technical expertise and financial or agency resources to deal with the problem and federal funding has been inadequate, she said.

"This year urban counties, and particularly Wayne County, face an even greater problem," Mrs. Dumas told the Senate committee.

"The combination of inflation and high unemployment is forcing state, county and local governments to cut back on their budgets for public and mental health and social services," she testified.

"High unemployment is creating severe economic distress and pressures within families. Not only are inner city kids faced with the inability to obtain summer jobs but youngsters from blue collar and middle income families are unable to find jobs and many are seeing their fathers standing in unemployment lines for the first time in their young lives."

MRS. DUMAS also recommended greater representation from major urban counties on the National Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Council. "Of 21 members appointed this year, only six live in counties of more than 100,000 population, and there is not a single member from Michigan or Wayne County—the third largest county in the country."

Local names tossed about as possible Hart successor

The names of a number of area politicians are being bandied about as possible U.S. Senate candidates as speculation mounts on whether Sen. Philip Hart (D-Mich.) will seek re-election in 1976.

Already, the name of U.S. Rep. Marvin L. Esch (R-Ann Arbor), whose 2nd District includes Livonia and Plymouth, is being mentioned as a possible candidate on the Republican side of the ballot.

For some months now, the name of U.S. Rep. William D. Ford (D-Taylor), whose 15th District includes Westland, Garden City and Canton Township, has been in the hopper as a possibility should Hart decide to step down.

Another local name in the mill is Dean Baker, University of Michigan regent and owner of the new Plymouth-Hilton Inn. Baker, active in GOP affairs, has been campaigning for the Republican nomination.

NAMES IN THE hopper include, of course, politicians with statewide recognition such as Democrats Frank Kelley, attorney general, and Richard Austin, secretary of state.

On the Republican side, the list includes Gov. William Milliken, U.S. Reps. Donald Riegle (R-Flint) and Philip Ruppe (R-Houghton), and L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County prosecutor.

Ford was peppered with questions at a recent meeting with the press of western Wayne County about his intentions. He repeatedly claimed Hart was his man for the Senate, and carefully refused to deny he would seek the seat if Hart stepped aside.

The speculation in the 15th District is that Ford will run for the Senate with State Sen. William Faust (D-Westland) then running for Ford's congressional job.

ESCH MAY get the call for the GOP nomination if Milliken should decide to stay in Lansing.

In gaining re-election, Esch has always drawn strongly from the independent voter. A candidate with similar bipartisan appeal would be sought by 2nd District GOP leaders.

The name which 2nd District Republicans are likely to consider first is State Sen. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), whose district includes Livonia, Redford Township and part of Westland.

Pursell, who had been considered for lieutenant governor in the 1974 state election, may also be tapped for an administrative post should Milliken be lured toward Washington, D.C.

With both Faust and Pursell pegged for moves up the ladder, a chance for advancement becomes available to state representatives.

Among the forerunners would be Rep. John Markes (D-Westland), whose district also includes part of Livonia, who is apt to be approached by the party to seek a state senatorship.

Markes though, may stay in the House to get a leadership position.

Rep. Robert Geake (R-Northville), whose district includes most of Livonia, is gaining seniority in the House and also is apt to be considered.

Rep. William Keith (D-Garden City) has gained some recognition for leadership in teacher strike legislation but, in the process, has not gained unanimous acclaim of Democratic labor leaders in Faust's district.

With speculation rampant in area party circles, it appears a foregone conclusion that Hart will step down. But that announcement has not yet been made.

3 county Dems urge mid-decade census

Three western Wayne County Democratic commissioners have sponsored a resolution urging the Legislature to adopt pending bills which would allow a mid-decade census.

Wayne County commissioners Royce Smith (D-Belleville), whose district includes Plymouth and Canton Township, Tom F. Taylor (D-Westland) whose district includes Garden City, and Edgar L. Harris (D-Taylor) drafted the resolution which was adopted unanimously by the board in late March.

The census would aid those municipalities whose population has increased since the last census to gain increased state funds distributed on a per capita basis.

5 candidates seek county school seats

Mrs. Geraldine W. Joyner, a 10-year member of the Livonia Board of Education, will seek election to the balance of the term to which she was appointed earlier this year on the Board of Education of the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

She will be opposed by Gerald McGrath, a 12-year member and now president of the Wayne-Westland Board of Education. McGrath is a retired Detroit Edison Co. employee.

Mrs. Joyner was appointed to replace Norman O. Stockmeyer who was named to the State Board of Education. Her appointment expires July 1. The candidate elected will serve the remaining four years of his term.

Mrs. Joyner, a housewife, is vice president of the Livonia board.

Three candidates are in the race for six-year terms in the June 2 election.

They are incumbents Rev. Darneau V. Stewart of Detroit, current president of the county board, and Carl W. Morris, current president of the Romulus Board of Education.

The third candidate is Dr. Cornelius L. Golightly, president of the Detroit Board of Education.

The election for the new terms, which begin July 1, will be held at 8 p.m. in the Wayne County Library, 33030 Van Born at Venoy in Wayne.

Members of the intermediate district board, who are unpaid, oversee the district's $30 million annual operation which includes a number of federal and state programs. They also coordinate all special education in Wayne County and furnish consultative services on all phases of public education for the 36 local school districts in the county.

6 file for 2 Plymouth school board seats

PLYMOUTH—Six candidates will vie for two four-year seats on the Plymouth Community Schools Board of Education in the June 9 election.

The seats are currently held by Carl Berry and Thomas Yack, who were elected to fill one-year vacancies on the board last year. Berry won't be seeking reelection, while Yack will.

Berry said "I'm not a politician and I'm getting too far away from working with kids. I didn't feel I was being effective on the board and there were a lot of things that I wanted to get done on the board that didn't get done."

Berry is completing his second one-year term on the board. He also served a one-year term in the 1971-72 school year.

Other candidates for the board, in addition to Yack are: Leslie C. Cavell, Joseph I. Gray, Elden Thomas, Flossie Tonda, and Jack D. Wiegand.

In addition to selecting two board members for the seven-member body which runs the school district, voters will be asked to approve two millage questions.

The first proposal seeks a renewal for four years of 5.15 mills in operating millage and the second seeks to place a retiring 0.4 mill safety millage and 0.06 mills in debt retirement in the general operating funds for the district.

The total of 0.46 mills in added operating millage will be offset by the lack of the safety millage and the reduction of the debt millage. If approved by the voters it would leave the same total millage levied within the district.

neering, Wayne State University, and the Chrysler Computer Center.

A member of the Marine Corps Reserve, Thomas is also active in the Marine Corps League as commandant of the Northwest Detachment. He is also a representative of the Marine Corps Youth Physical Fitness Program.

"I think they should have more civil participation in school board business," Thomas said.

"I've been involved in opposition to 45-15, but that isn't my only concern. I'm concerned with everything including busing and overcrowded conditions. We must find solutions to growth without building unnecessary schools.

"I'd like to see a greater representation for the residents of the district. Residents aren't being recognized when it comes to school business."

I feel I can give the views of the residents—the people in the school district.

"With the economic situation as it is now, I feel I can provide input into spending money within the district how the people would like it to go."

Thomas Yack
43850 Brandywine
Canton Township

Yack is currently completing his first year on the Plymouth school board and is currently its treasurer.

The 28-year-old father of three is the director of Project Metric in the Wayne-Westland Schools.

Yack has been a resident of the school district for four years and received both his bachelor's and master's degrees from Eastern Michigan University.

As a member of the board, Yack is a member of the Intergovernmental Committee, a representative group of the communities within the Plymouth Community Schools. Other activities include being a former member of the Windsor Park Civic Association board, and a current member of the St. Michael Lutheran Church Council. He is also the church's Sunday School superintendent.

"From the standpoint of an incumbent, there are some things to be done yet. I had some ideas when I was elected and some have been completed and some have not. We are now closer to greater intergovernmental cooperation and we've brought more state and federal dollars into the district.

"I'd like to see greater articulation in the elementary and middle school programs to tie our program together both across grades and also as a student moves from elementary to middle school and high school."

"We need to have more alternatives for kids in their education."

Jack Wiegand
40516 Newport
Plymouth Township

Wiegand, 41, is an investigator for the Friend of the Court in Oakland County.

A resident of the district for three years, he is married and has no children.

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan and has studied at the Detroit College of Law, and the Wayne State University Law School, completing a portion of his work toward a law degree.

Wiegand has also attended graduate school at the University of Detroit and Oakland University.

He is currently on the steering committee, the building and grounds committee and the rules committee of the Braddon Condominium Association.

"I feel that sitting on the school board gives me the opportunity to contribute to the community in which I live. I don't know what the needs of the district are, but I offer myself as a thinking person that can make reasonable decisions.

"I don't know who the other candidates are and I haven't attended any school board meetings. All I know is somebody else has got the job and I want it."

Mrs. Tonda, 49, is the chairman of the Plymouth Community Schools Safety Committee and the secretary of the Canton Township Planning Commission.

The mother of two has been a resident of the district for seven years and is president of the Plymouth Community Schools Council, representing PTO's within the school district.

She is a graduate of Darlington High School, Darlington, Ind.

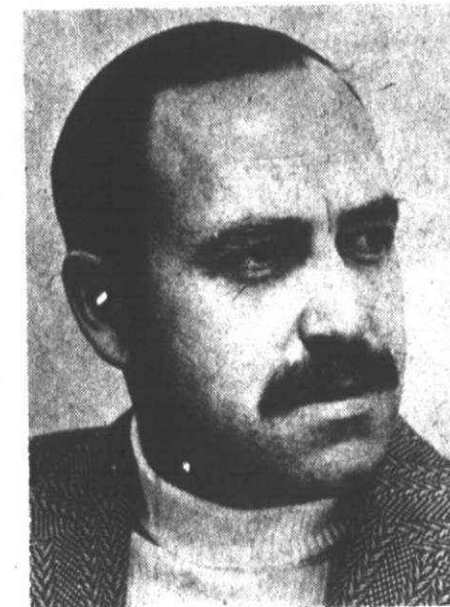

"I'm concerned about the district. I've been involved as a volunteer and Canton Phase III involving the addition to Canton High; and the Centennial Educational Park Committee.

Gray is a graduate of Western Illinois University, receiving his bachelor's degree in business in 1966.

"I am interested in the school system and would like to add some stabilization to the board. It doesn't seem the board is all pulling in one direction.

"I hope that I'll be able to add some good business experience and background to the board."

Thomas is a designer at Chrysler Corporation and has been a resident of the district for three years.

The 40-year-old father of three has attended Chrysler Institute of Engithe community and there is a need for more information to be put out to the people. There hasn't been enough of a selling job done to the residents about the various programs in the district.

"It's important that the information be made available to the public so they know what's going on."

Joseph I. Gray
40228 Ivywood Ln.
Plymouth Township

Gray is a former member of the Plymouth school board, serving one year in 1973-74 as treasurer of the board.

A resident of the district for eight years, the 42-year-old manufacturer's representative is the father of three children.

He has served on several committees within the district including:

Leslie C. Cavell

A resident of the school district for 16 years, Cavell is maintenance superintendent at the Livonia Fisher Body Plant.

The 53-year-old father of six is a 1939 graduate of Flint Central High School and attended the University of Michigan and Iowa State University under the Navy V-12 program.

Cavell is also currently an advisor at Washtenaw Community College in the Industrial Technology program and is a member of the Plymouth Lions Club.

"I was approached by friends who were upset about how funds are spent in the district and that's why I'm running for the board. I think the district is open to some improvements.

Wayne-Westland school board race draws 7

WESTLAND—Two incumbents and five challengers will vie for the two four-year seats up for grabs in the June 9 Wayne-Westland school board election.

Mrs. Anne Harbison of Westland is seeking a second four-year term, after conducting an accountability survey to determine her popularity among the district's voters. The survey was the first of its kind in this area to evaluate the effectiveness of a board member.

She is a member of the Wayne-Westland Arts Commission and the Madison School PTA. Holding a seat on the State Department of Education Curriculum Committee, she has been active in Republican politics as an alternate delegate to the 1972 GOP national convention.

Seeking another term also is Robert Reichard of Westland who has served on the board for the last 10 years. He has lived in the area for 20 years.

An employee of Commercial Carriers, he is a member of Teamsters Local 299. He has been a representative and negotiator for the Teamsters for 18 years.

Reichard says he believes in discipline and would like to see more of it in the schools. Because of his long service to the district, he believes he has valuable experience in handling problems that plague administrators, teachers, parents and students.

JOHN KENDALL of Westland is a product change analyst for the Ford Motor Company. He came to Westland in 1966 after serving four years in the Air Force.

Kendall, 47, believes that schools should be the focal point of the community. Many young persons, he says, feel inadequate and unprepared for meeting the challenges of the future. He says the schools should adjust their priorities to bring them in line with young persons and society in general.

A main thrust of education, he says, is to prepare the leaders of tomorrow.

James DuPree, 29, of Westland, an electrical engineer for Rockwell International, sees community involvement and a chance to improve and work in the school district as two reasons for his candidacy.

DuPree is on the board of directors of the Wayne-Westland YMCA and is a member of the Wayne-Westland Arts Association. He is a member of the Kirk of Our Savior United Presbyterian Church.

Cliff Johnson, 47, the only candidate from Wayne, is a pipefitter. He has lived in the district for 19 years and has four children in the district.

Johnson served for three years on the Citizens Career and Vocational Education Committee and presently is serving on the Citizens Advisory Committee for building and improvements within the district. He is a Wayne Chamber of Commerce member.

Serving on the Wayne City Board of Canvassers, he has been chairman of the fundraising for the Christian Youth camp. He served as co-chairman for the Concerned Citizens Committee Against Cross-District Busing.

He says school board trustees should concentrate on directing the resources of the district for the benefit of the students rather than making the position of a political stepping stone.

FRED KLUS, 35, of Westland, is running for a board seat because "of some of the actions and inactions by one of the board members who will be seeking reelection on June 9."

Klus is opposed to the questionnaire statement distributed by Mrs. Harbison recently.

"The only questionnaire is one's own conscience. You, yourself, know whether you have participated in school and community affairs adequately," he says.

A past president of the Elliot School PTA, Klus is a trustee of the Wayne-Ford Civic League. Currently, he is chairman for the Westland Spring Festival and is starting his third year as president of the Wayne-Westland Democratic Club. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, Polish Legion of American Veterans and Divine Child Dads Club.

Agnes Green of Westland is a retired teacher and counselor in the district. She highlights her experience as a parent in the community and her background in education as reasons she qualifies for the position.

Along with a strong academic program, vocational and career education must be expanded for students who intend to terminate their education after high school, she says.

A graduate of Olivet College, she is past president of the Ladies Literary Club and is a charter member of the community school sex education committee.

Mail service improved in Canton

Plymouth Postmaster John Mulligan has announced that mail service pickup at five locations in Canton Township has been improved.

A 5 p.m. collection run has been added to mailboxes at Hanford and Lilley, Ford and Lilley, Hanford and Sheldon, Meijer's Shopping Center, and K-Mart Shopping Center.

Mulligan said the normal pickup has been handled by letter carriers, but because of the increased volume of mail in Canton the 5 p.m. pickup runs have been added. Carriers will still make an earlier pickup at some time during the day.

"This goes along with what Supervisor Robert Greenstein had requested when he asked us for improved mail service in Canton Township," Mulligan said.

Chamber music featured at concert

PLYMOUTH—Members of the Centennial Educational Park music department will present a chamber music concert tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. in the Canton Little Theatre. Featured on the program will be the music of Bach, Vivaldi, Mozart, and others.

Featured senior soloists for the evening include Kathy Stein on violin, and Karen Routson and Linda Lowing on flute in Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 4" in G major.

Junior Kathy Harrington will be the violin soloist in the first movement of Antonio Vivaldi's "Summer" from the "Seasons" collection of four solo violin concertos. This selection will be conducted by Steve Knope, a senior at CEP and a member of the chamber orchestra and the woodwind quintet.

A special guest soloist on the program will be Shelly Ryder, a former first chair flutist in the Plymouth High School Orchestra, who is currently a senior at Indiana University. She will perform the first movement of the Mozart "Flute Concerto in G Major."

Under the direction of Michael Endres, the orchestra will perform the first movement of the Debussy "Quartet in G minor," Opus 10 and the Scherzo from Beethoven's "Quartet Opus 18, No. 4."

The closing selection will be the "Water Music Suite," by Handel. The chamber orchestra will provide the accompaniment for all the concertos under the direction of Endres.

In January, the chamber orchestra received an invitation to perform at the 30th annual Midwestern Music Conference held in Ann Arbor, and the orchestra has also performed at each CEP Symphony Orchestra concert throughout the school year.

assign the CAC with tasks and prevent them from looking into matters they'd like to."

Clerk John Flodin responded, "If I were a member of the advisory council and the board overburdened me with work, I'd tell them to go bag it." "There has always been some political overtones to this issue, and I have never understood why," said Greenstein. "Why should the advisory council be an anti-board group or a political tool? I made this resolution as an honest attempt to get a CAC off the ground."

He added, "It's a straight forward investigatory body. There's no hidden dragons or 'boogie-men' here. Anyone that thinks that should go consult a psychiatrist."

Airport expansion

airport and it's another to create problems that don't exist."

Spencer said the figures homeowners are distributing on accidents are "1,000 per cent wrong."

Homeowners have been distributing a fact sheet which says that expansion of the airport would result in 11 deaths annually, according to national figures. "That's way off," said Spencer. "There have been only two deaths at Mettetal in the last 35 years and one of them was the result of somebody stealing an aircraft."

Added Carmody, "These so called civic leaders are 'mis-leaders'. An airport has been and always will be one of the biggest assets a community could hope for."

Carmody, who has been flying for 17 years, says his business is aided greatly by Mettetal. "What the people don't realize, he said, 'is that even if the airport was expanded, there's no way jets are going to use it.'"

Manning joins court facility study group

Wayne County Commissioner Richard E. Manning (D-Redford) has been appointed by Roscoe Bobo, chairman of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, as the county's representative on the state bar ad hoc committee on courtroom facilities.

The bar association committee will help formulate a unified plan for court facilities to serve all Wayne County residents.

Manning, an attorney, says: "I consider Wayne County representation on this committee to be most important because the committee was established due to problems arising from the housing of five new circuit court judges right here in Wayne County."

"Because the problem began here and is still being thrashed out in the courts, I believe it essential the committee have benefit of all the input Wayne County can provide. My appointment reflects my concern that the housing of judges, both temporarily and permanently, is a matter of pressing urgency."

The ad hoc committee will also consist of various judges, bar associations members, and perhaps one member of the State Supreme Court.

5 Kelly supervisors attend training meet

Georganne Spindler, resident manager, and Karen Sinkovich, Elaine Keally, Terri Duff, and Mary Freeman, supervisors of the Kelly Services Livonia branch recently attend a Southfield regional training meeting where the temporary help company instructed personnel in customer and employee relations, internal operations and marketing plans.

RONALD P. RASHID of Redford Township has been named resident manager for the Detroit branch of Hornblower & Weeks-Hemphill, Noyes Incorporated. Rashid attended University of Detroit and University of Michigan before joining the firm's Detroit office in 1955.

Hayward running for SC trustee

Richard J. Hayward, 46, of Livonia, has filed as a candidate for one of two seats on the Schoolcraft College board of trustees to be decided in the June 9 election.

Hayward, of 17159 Loveland, is executive vice-president of Freedland Structural Steel Co. in Livonia.

He has been active in the Livonia Hockey Association since its inception as a coach and director of the junior division. Last season he served the group as vice-president.

Hayward is also a member and officer of Toastmasters International Club 1660 of Plymouth.

HAYWARD SAYS he had been making a number of speeches about the importance of education and the need for citizens to get involved. "I finally decided to stop talking and start doing."

"I have the time to devote to my business, family and Schoolcraft College. I wouldn't make a commitment to become involved in anything unless I could devote the time and energies to do a good job."

With the trend toward career education, he adds, Schoolcraft has a great opportunity to fill the needs of all students whether they are planning to complete a four-year curriculum or enter the work force.

"We must remember that the percentage of high school students in the area who go on to college is 50 to 60 per cent, but on the average only about half of this number graduate. This means there is a vast opportunity to help what amounts to 65 per cent of the high school graduates."

Howard feels any careers program for a community college must remain flexible so alterations can be made as changes occur in the job market.

"When a skills shortage exists in the marketplace, a class is created to train students for the job. We must make sure the class isn't then offered out of habit once that articular job field becomes saturated. Maybe that class should be dropped and another substituted with more job saleability."

HAYWARD WAS born in Windsor and attended Assumption College.

He served in the U.S. Army with the Corps of Engineers, Fort Belvoir, Va., as a surveying instructor in the engineers' school.

He moved to Michigan in 1953 and settled in East Detroit and has lived in Livonia for the past 10 years.

"Being executive vice-president of a corporation classed as small business, I come in contact with all aspects of the business world rather than an isolated portion," relations and production labor relations. "I feel this varied background will allow me to add some objectivity and varied views

Docket notification to be computerized

A computerized mailing system intended to prevent the kinds of oversights which led to dismissal of a suit to recover some $150,000 in allegedly misspent Ecorse city funds has been put into operation by Wayne County Clerk James R. Killeen.

The new system also should reduce costs by $1,200 per month, he said.

ATTORNEYS for both plaintiff and defendant will be notified by mail when a civil case goes on the "no progress" docket, Killeen said. A case goes on the "no progress" docket when there has been no action by ei-

Doll-pet parade to be May 17

Wonderland Center in Livonia will hold its annual Doll and Pet Parade Saturday, May 17, beginning at noon.

Trophies will be awarded for most unusual pet and best of show for any pet.

Trophies for dog owners include: Best of show for under 25 pounds and for more than 25 pounds; best trained (60 seconds to perform); saddest face; most spots; shaggiest; waggiest tail; best dressed; most unusual; and best groomed.

Trophies cat owners can win include: best of show; longest whiskers; and fluffiest coat. A trophy for "in costume" is open to all pets with pet and owner of pet in competition.

For dolls, trophies will be awarded for best dressed and most unusual.

All pets must be on leashes or in hand-carrying case. Only one pet per child may be entered and only one category per pet. Those entering must phone Wonderland Center office, Plymouth at Middle Belt Road, before May 14.

RICHARD J. HAYWARD

He moved to Michigan in 1953 and settled in East Detroit and has lived in Livonia for 10 years.

Health services free Saturday

Wayne County General Hospital will mark National Hospital Week with a three-hour free health clinic Saturday, May 17, from 1-4 p.m.

The clinic will provide free immunizations and screening for hypertension and lead poisoning.

Employees from various hospital departments also will be available in the lobby on Friday to answer questions and distribute written materials. A photo exhibit of hospital activities will be on display.

Immunizations available will include: both the primary series and booster shots of combined diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough; the followup series of tetanus and diphtheria; oral polio; measles and rubella, and mumps.

ther side for seven months. The former court rule was that a case would be dismissed after one year.

In the past, parties were notified through a printed notice in the Legal News.

"There would be reams and reams of no-progress notices," Killeen said. "What happened, in effect, was someone in a law office would be told to check the notices. If he or she missed one, the case would wind up being dismissed."

BETWEEN 1,300 and 1,500 cases go on the no-progress docket every month," the clerk said. "So you can see how a secretary or clerk in a large law office could overlook one."

The prosecutor's office has petitioned to have the Ecorse case reinstated. It was filed in August, 1972, in an effort to recover allegedly misspent city funds from 63 city employees and officials.

The suit was filed following a special state audit of the city's expenditures for the period between July, 1970, and April, 1972.

Environment hot line starts

Michigan's first "hot line" for environmental emergencies is now operating 24 hours a day.

Oil spills, fish kills, garbage dumping and violations of air and water pollution laws get immediate response from experts if they are reported on the special telephone line.

The special phone number is 517-373-7660. After office hours, a special operator takes the calls and immediately contacts a State Department of Natural Resources expert.

The expert decides whether a complaint needs immediate attention.

Sen. Pursell co-chairs GOP dinner

LANSING — State Sen. Carl D. Pursell (R-Plymouth) has been named a co-chairman for the 11th annual Republican Legislative Dinner.

State Rep. John Engler (R-Mount Pleasant) is the other co-chairman for the dinner in the Lansing Civic Center June 17 beginning with a cash bar at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:30.

The nation's youngest governor, Christopher (Kit) Bond, will be featured speaker. Bond at age 34 was elected in 1973 and at that time became the first Republican to sit in the governor's office in Missouri in 32 years.

Tickets are $100 a plate or $125 per couple. Money raised goes toward campaign expenses of House and Senate candidates. Last year more than 1,200 attended the affair.

Pursell's district includes Livonia, Redford Township and a portion of Westland.

Madonna plans enrichment series

First aid to victims of recession and inflation will be offered at seven weekly seminars at Madonna College from May 15 through Sept. 18.

The evening sessions, free to the public, are geared to help people better understand the problems and effects of inflation and recession as related to their daily lives, according to Sister Mary Dapnatha, Madonna president.

A businessman, an economist and a psychologist are among those who will speak at the Thursday meetings from 7 to 10 p.m. in Madonna's lecture hall.

Registration forms for either individual sessions or the complete series may be obtained by calling Sister Mary Fisher, O.P., project coordinator, at the college.

REV. JOSEPH DAOUST, SJ, professor of economics at the University of Detroit, will open the series. His topic will be "What's at Stake in the Economic Mess? What Options Should We Consider?"

Dr. Randal Hoyer, assistant professor of history at Madonna, will moderate discussion of "Wanted, Dead or Alive: The Real American," at the June 5 session. Jerry Blocker, TV newscaster, will lead the discussion.

A husband-wife team of Sheila Damiano, sociology chairperson at Madonna, and Frank Damiano, music theory and piano instructor at Henry Ford Community College, will relate some of their experiences helping people of all ages achieve self-fulfillment at the June 26 meeting.

DR. WILLIAM GREENMAN, chairman of the department of psychological services for Wayne-Westland schools, will deal with a practical application of psychology in regard to economic setbacks at the July 17 seminar.

Dennis Bozyk, chairman of the social science division at Madonna, and Dearborn businessman Joseph Curran will share the July 31 session.

They will examine and compare political, social and economic consequences of uncontrolled inflation with those of recession and depression.

Dr. Don Byrne, professor of economics at the University of Detroit, and a representative of the State Attorney General's Consumer Protection Agency will be featured at the Aug. 28 session. They will discuss marketing, consumerism and investment decision.

Dr. James Reilly, chairman of the communication arts department at Madonna, will close the series Sept. 18, examining the topic, "Is Self-Reliance Enough?"

Thomas Fisher, production supervisor at Burroughs Corp. will join in the discussion with an analysis of the attitudes which a corporation seeks in its employees.

Primary vote bill blasted

WAYNE COUNTY—A proposal to shift primary elections in Michigan from August to September has drawn fire from Wayne County Clerk James R. Killeen.

It might even delay the state's 1976 presidential election for a month, he declared, so that "Michigan could keep the nation holding its breath for perhaps a month before we would know who was elected President."

State Senate Bill No. 57 would move the primary from the Tuesday following the first Monday in August to the same day in September. The state constitution mandates that the final election be held on the first Tuesday following the first Monday in November, as is true nationally.

A SEPTEMBER primary would present virtually insurmountable technical problems with the present state of voting technology in Michigan, Killeen maintained.

One reason, he said, is the variety of voting systems being used. These include two kinds of punch card ballots, at least two types of voting machines, plus paper ballots in some places. Each requires a separate system for canvassing and recounts.

There would not be enough time between elections for recounts, resolution of court challenges, printing and distribution of ballots and the preparing of voting equipment, Killeen contended.

Moreover, a September primary could deprive "vast numbers" of absentee voters of their vote, he said, because there would not be enough time between elections to prepare, mail and receive back the absentee ballots. The law requires that absentee ballots be delivered at least 45 days prior to an election.

"I WILL SUPPORT changes in the election process that will shorten campaigns," Killeen said, "but this proposed legislation is not the vehicle to accomplish that goal."

Any new legislation should be directed toward increasing voter participation, Killeen asserted, and he urged instead that sweeping national changes in the timing of elections be considered to maximize voter turnout.

He described as "stupidity" the present system of holding primary elections in August when many are vacationing away from home and final elections in November when "foul" weather reduces voter participation.

He suggested that elections be held in the Spring when weather is generally better and on national holidays when he said more voters would have time to vote.

The Legislature twice before has considered and rejected proposals for a September primary.

County OKs 2nd grand jury

WAYNE COUNTY—A second grand jury, the subject of whose inquiry is protected by law, has been approved by the board of commissioners.

The board agreed May 1 to appropriate an additional $50,000 to the Circuit Court to fund a second grand jury.

The county already provides the Circuit Court with $84,000 for grand jury activities.

The original request from Circuit Court administrator was for an additional $84,000, but the request was cut by the Public Safety and Judiciary Committee with the provision that should the court need more money it could request it.

How to double your money in a retirement nestegg with deferred-tax dollars.

If you are one of the 40 million people who have no company-sponsored pension program, now is the time to look into an Individual Retirement Account at NBD.

In 1974, new Federal legislation was passed to help millions of Americans provide for their retirement years.

National Bank of Detroit moved quickly to bring you the advantages of this new legislation through an approved Individual Retirement Account.

Here's how an IRA can help you multiply a surprisingly modest investment into a substantial retirement nestegg.

Double tax savings.

With an IRA, both the money you put into the account, and the interest your money earns while on deposit, are tax exempt until the time of withdrawal.

This means you can take a tax deduction on the amount deposited into your IRA each year, allow the earnings to accumulate tax-free, then withdraw your money when you retire

End of Year	Your tax deferred IRA contribution	You will have if invested at:
	$1500/yr.	6%	7-1/2%
5	$ 7,500	$ 8,478.69	$ 8,749.78
10	15,000	19,898.26	21,436.51
15	22,500	35,278.75	39,831.61
20	30,000	55,994.06	66,503.55
25	37,500	83,894.57	105,176.47
30	45,000	121,472.51	161,250.20 and are more likely to be in a lower tax bracket.

Double your money in 20 years.

The new legislation allows you to deposit as much as 15% of your annual earned income—up to a maximum of $1500—into an IRA.

And while you may choose any NBD savings plan as your IRA, the chart shows how our new Investment Savings Certificates can multiply your IRA nestegg.

By taking advantage of our NBD Investment Savings Certificates that now pay 7-1/2% over six years on amounts of $1000 or more, for example, you would more than double your money in 20 years.

And all the while your money would be protected by both the federal government, and by the substantial capital of Michigan's biggest bank. There is, however, a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal of Investment Savings Certificates.

Now's the time.

Anyone who is not now covered by an employer-sponsored retirement plan may open an Individual Retirement Account at NBD.

And because our interest rates have never been higher, now is the time to begin putting tax-deferred dollars to work for you in an IRA.

For more information, pick up our new free IRA booklet at any NBD office. Or ask the people there to help you personally.

Making banking better for you.

Square dancing on Main Street

Caller Mike Trombly will have folks square dancing in the streets Saturday afternoon as Northville opens its celebration of Michigan Week. Trombly, a Livonian, and his wife Ernie will begin two hours of square dancing at 2:30 p.m. right in the middle of Main Street. Members of one of their classes will be there to help break the ice, but anyone who has a light heart will be able to join the festivities. "MAIN STREET from Wing, which is a block west of Center Street, to Hutton will be closed for the pedestrian mall event," according to Larry Weiner, president of the Northville Merchants Association. "At 10 in the morning, we'll have a parade with the Northville High School band to open the festivities," said Weiner. Main Street has been closed off in the past for sidewalk sales, but this will be the town's first pedestrian mall event, according to the leader of the 40-member merchants group. IN THE WORKADAY world, Mike, the square dance caller, is better known as Michael E. Trombly of 3825 Jamison, Livonia, vice president of manufacturing for Veritex Corp. of Detroit.

Tornado procedures explained

Michigan has entered its peak season of tornado peril as the warmer temperatures of May and June move in with high humidity. "When a tornado weather bulletin is issued, people should take it seriously," warned George Howe, Eastern Michigan University professor and climate expert. "It is difficult to issue an effective tornado watch or warning because the whole thing is often over very quickly," Howe said. "This is why people who have heard a tornado bulletin should be alert to what's going on outside so they can evaluate conditions and take quick action." Once a tornado is sighted, a person should move to the most protected part of a building, Howe said. In a house, this usually means the basement where the best shelter is under sturdy. If outdoors, one should look for the lowest part of the ground, possibly a ditch or culvert. A motorist should drive at right angles away from the apparent path of the tornado in an attempt to out-drive its average 35 mph speed. Most tornado deaths are a result of debris hitting or falling on people, Howe said.

'911' system may go countywide

The "911" telephone number for dialing emergency calls may be adopted throughout Wayne County.

A meeting was held recently between representatives from most of the 43 communities in the county with a committee of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners and the Michigan Bell Telephone Company to discuss feasibility of the plan.

In Wayne County, the "911" system is in effect only in Detroit and the City of Wayne — although some adjacent communities benefit inadvertently because of overlapping telephone exchanges. An example is the area of Westland which has a Wayne phone exchange (PA).

Westland City Council is presently considering approving the "911" program for the entire city and has been in touch with telephone company officials.

WHERE THE 911 system operates, callers can dial just those three digits for aid for any fire, police or medical emergency.

Commissioner Edward Michalski, chairman of the board's public safety and judiciary committee, says the "911" system is being considered because "it seems logical and would contribute to the safety of the greatest number of residents in our county if shared financing can be arranged."

Michalski said most persons at the meeting, numbering about 50, were interested in the system but concerned about cost and wouldn't make commitments to the project without further evaluation within their own communities.

He asked the group to poll residents and officials of their localities and return May 2, for another planning session. If interest prevails, says Michalski, the group will then appoint a task force to develop the system amongst participating communities.

THE THREE-DIGIT system provides faster response and is easier to remember in emergency situations when panic is often involved, said a phone company spokesman.

Genesee County has already adopted the system countywide, points out Michalski, and the entire state of California hopes to have such a system operating in the early 1980s.

Federal funding for equipment and operator training is available if enough communities join the program, says Michalski, and cost would be divided among participating communities.

Phone company representatives explained that a "911" system must cover an entire phone exchange.

In some cases, one exchange may encompass several localities or, on the other hand, one community may be served by several exchanges. Westland, for example, has four telephone exchanges. The exchange for the City of Wayne also covers several other cities. Thus somebody dialing 911 on the PA exchange would have to be transferred to his home police department.

The Romulus Fire Chief said the overlap of exchanges and community boundaries is the major barrier that must be solved in developing an area-wide 911 system.

Expressway building plans still in high gear

Things change, oh, so slowly. But they do change.

Take the idea of expressways, for example. Back in the 1950s, the big, multiple lane, limited access roads were judged to be all things to all people: the salvation of the cities, the creator of the suburbs, the ultimate solution to the country's traffic problems.

So expressways were built—thousands upon thousands of miles—pushing from the suburbs through the cities and back to the suburbs, linking one area of the country with any other.

BUT, SLOWLY, oh so slowly, the realization grew that expressways were hardly what they were supposed to be.

Instead of being the salvation of the cities, they gobbled land out of the tax base, hacked previously stable neighborhoods to bits, and provided the means for the middle class to flee.

While creating the suburbs, the expressways also insured decentralized, sprawling housing and business patterns of land use which could not be provided with city services and mass transit at an acceptable cost.

And rather than providing the ultimate solution to our traffic problems, the expressways merely called forth ever-increasing volumes of cars, which then came together regularly in ever-increasing traffic jams.

If you want to learn, in vast and excruciating detail, just how over-reliance on expressways can ruin a great city and wreck a peaceful region, just look through Robert Caro's recent book, "The Power Broker," which describes the career of Robert Moses, New York's great public works boss. It's a terrifying story, and it applies with only a few changes right here in southeastern Michigan.

IN THIS connection, a news release that came across my desk this morning announced that SEMCOG's Council on Regional Development is expected this week to approve the regional 1990 Transportation Plan. If this happens, and if SEMCOG's executive committee OK's the plan, the whole thing will be up for approval at the general assembly meeting in June.

The plan, which took over 10 years to produce, beginning with the Transportation and Land Use Study of the 1960s, is perhaps the single most important document produced in this decade in terms of its effect on the future growth and development of the region.

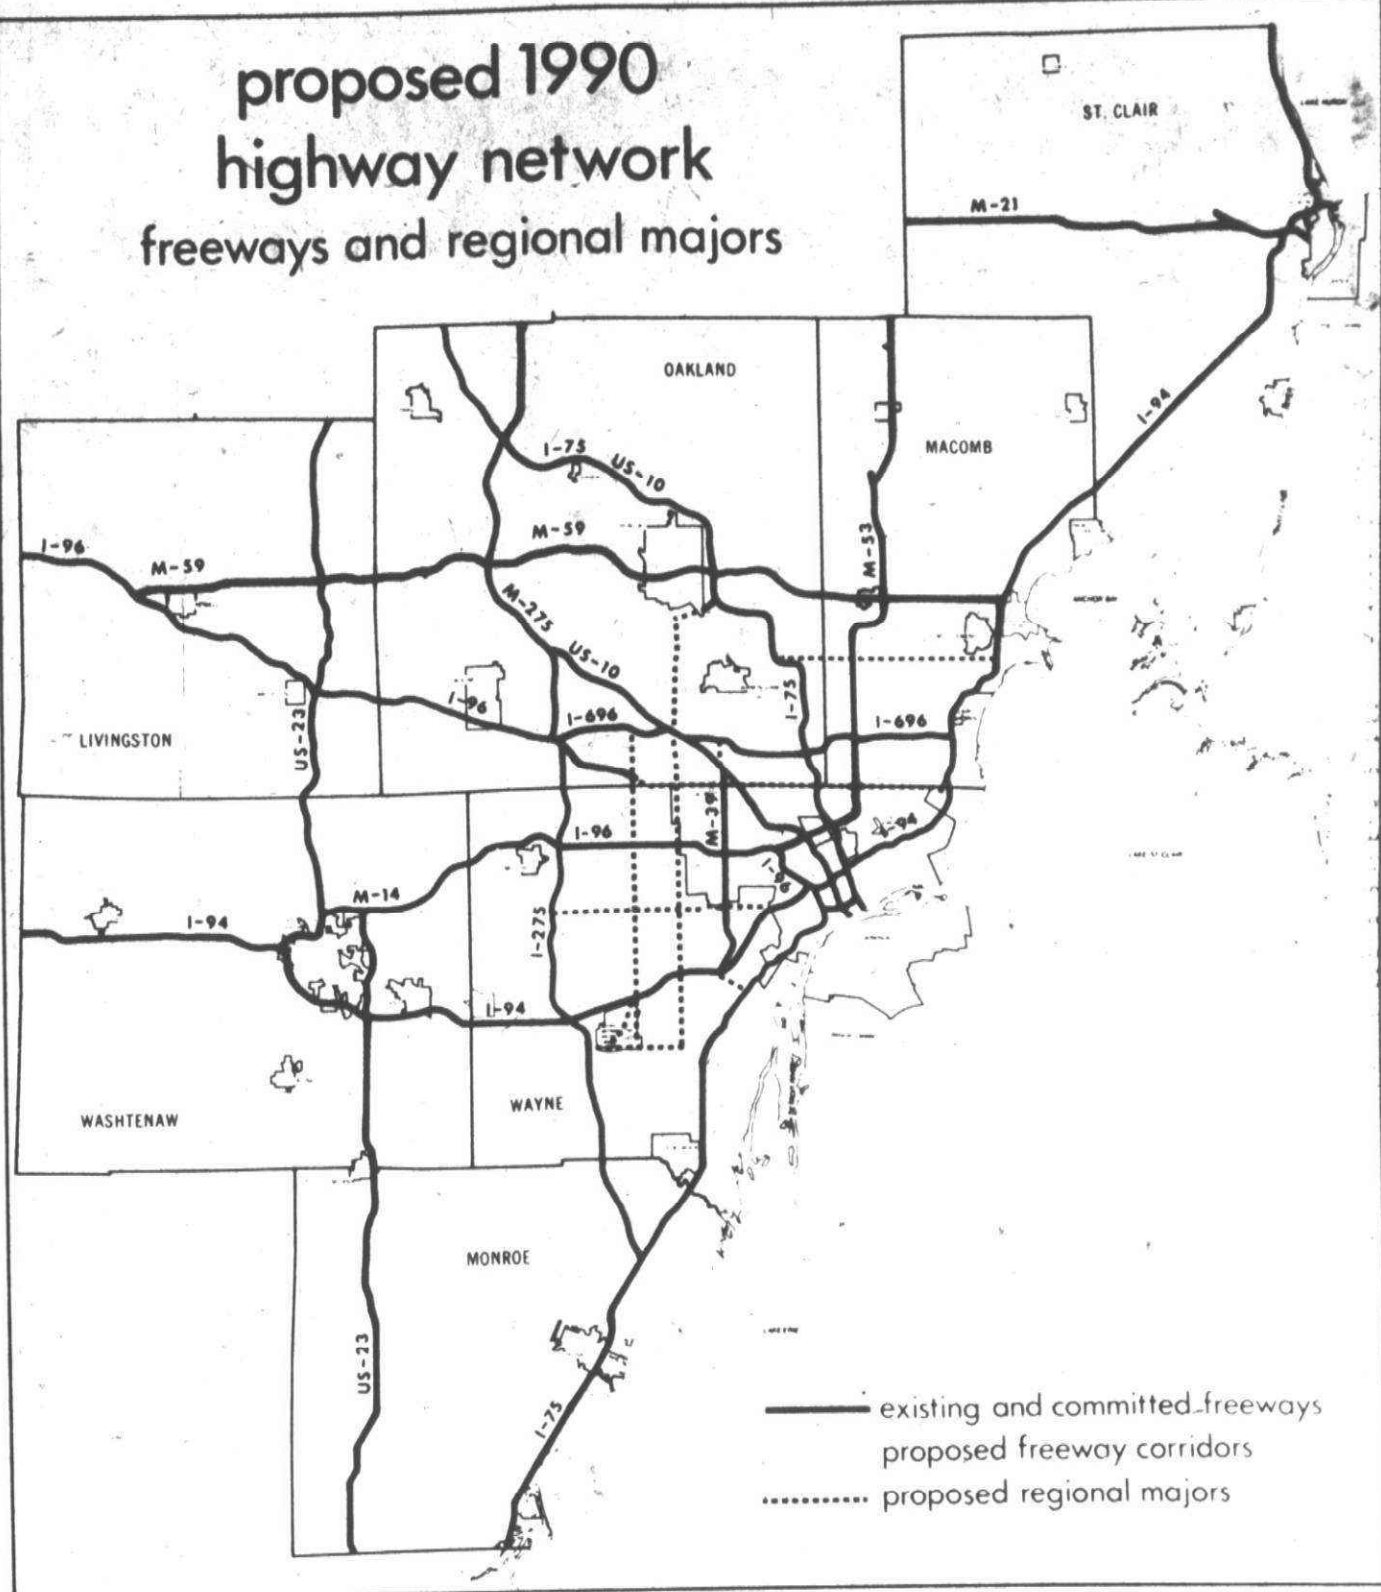

It would add 70 miles of expressway to the existing 670-mile system, together with another 120 miles of multiple lane, controlled speed "regional major" roads.

It would also provide high speed rail mass transit lines out Woodward, Grand River and Michigan Avenue, bus services along I-96, Telegraph, Eight Mile, Merriman and Inkster Roads, and a series of "people mover" systems around Northland.

THE 1990 plan has been carefully thought through, and it does not place total reliance on expressways. It assumes that the private automobile will continue to be the major mechanism of travel for many years—an assumption that probably will prove correct.

My only worry is that the revised view of the damaging effects of expressways is so new and has come so late in the development of the 1990 transportation plan that full force has not been paid to it.

I hope the SEMCOG people will make it possible to amend the plan as time goes along, so that the transportation needs of this region are not excessively cast in the concrete which has created so many of the expressways which are now giving us so many problems.

Suburbs need county jail branch, services

Tim Richard writes

If a space visitor from a von Daniken book were to visit Wayne County and select a point for the seat of government, the last spot he would pick would be a far corner of the territory, along the Detroit River.

But that is exactly what human beings did, back in the days when people traveled by birch bark canoe and sailboat as well as oxcart, and some of the more rabid Detroit politicians want to keep it that way.

Specifically, the issue is whether Wayne County should build a jail annex and other county offices on the "Eloise" property in Westland. The plan has much merit.

DOWNTOWN DETROIT is an hour's drive for some of us in these suburbs—a two hour round trip. Parking fees are atrocious. Only in the upper peninsula counties of Menominee and Dickinson can you find county seats geographically more remote.

In addition to the fact that a man and woman seeking a marriage license must take practically a half-day off work to get one, there are other excellent governmental reasons for locating some county offices on the Westland site.

Westland Mayor Eugene McKinney would prefer to see the site developed commercially but is civic-minded enough to agree to the jail plan if a circuit court complex came with it.

Garden City Police Chief Robert Behrendt notes his town's little lockup is "definitely overcrowded now. We have no facilities for women prisoners, either. We either have to take them downtown, bond them out or let them loose. And often they're in no physical condition to be let go."

Ask Behrendt and he'll tell you the delicate problem he had with a man accused of murder who had a history of mental problems and care. A little jail like Garden City's couldn't provide the level of care a human is entitled to. A county jail nearby could.

Even the simplest court activity requires Behrendt's officers to make that two-hour trip downtown, through all that traffic. That's a poor way to use an officer's time.

"WE KEEP hearing that the rich Republicans in the western Wayne County suburbs don't need county services," says County Commissioner Mary Dumas, a Republican but not rich.

Mrs. Dumas reports great fear on the part of Detroit politicians that the central city's status will shrink, but adds that it's a weak reason for denying the western suburbs some convenience.

Calhoun County provides a good example of how it can be done. The county seat is Marshall, in the middle of the county, but there's a population concentration at Battle Creek on the west. So Calhoun County provides Battle Creek a two-person clerk's office to issue marriage licenses, birth certificates and assumed names; a friend of the court office; a circuit court bench; a probation office, and mental health services.

Mrs. Dumas points out that there's no need to provide a full run of circuit court services for the suburbs. Even one judge could handle arraignments, a two-minute procedure; such cases as no-fault divorce and friend of the court matters could conceivably require a referee instead of an ordained judge.

WAYNE COUNTY hasn't heard of it yet, but there are methods for transmitting documents over a telephone wire or retrieving a record from a computer.

Why couldn't that technology be employed in the suburbs so folks wouldn't have to go all the way downtown to get a copy of a legal paper or a deed?

To give the county its due, one should point out that certain rural-type services have office locations in the suburbs: Cooperative Extension Service, drain commissioner, sheriff's road patrol and the like, to mention a few.

So there's no reason except politics not to provide jail, circuit court, probate court, clerk and other services to the western suburbs, too. After all, where do more than half the people of Wayne County live?

The feds interfere again with energy tax on autos

"Government that governs least, governs best," is a fine old quote that I use to attribute to Thomas Jefferson until I couldn't find it in any of his speeches.

The quote came to mind when I read that Congress is in the process of placing a graduated tax on automobiles manufactured in the future if they are unable to go 18 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

This is part of a new energy proposal that eventually will make this country self-sufficient in its energy needs.

This type of legislation rankles me.

A TAX IS supposed to be a method of raising revenue.

This type of tax is meant to coerce private industry into taking action where the federal government has no ordinary authority to regulate an industry practice.

What will be the result? The car companies will build smaller cars to meet the standard, will make less profit, will hire fewer people and Detroit will have another recession.

Once more the government will enter the marketplace and mess it up by using the wrong techniques to achieve its end.

Am I overstating the case?

THERE ISN'T an economist in this country who won't tell you that the present recession was caused in the main by the policies of the federal government.

In an attempt to ease inflationary pressures

Eccentricities

by HANK HOGAN

the Federal Reserve over-reacted and strangled the economy.

The reason the Fed felt it had to act was to overcome the federal policies that caused the inflation in the first place—deficit spending.

Detroit has been hit harder than any other city in the nation during this present recession.

Why? Federal safety and pollution standards increased the price of cars at the same time the Fed was drying up credit in the country.

PEOPLE DIDN'T buy cars because they said the price was too high.

Isn't it about time the American people told their elected representatives to stay out of the marketplace unless there are demonstrated abuses.

This country was not built by governmental regulation. It was built by the freest enterprise system the world has ever seen.

Whoever said it, wasn't that far off base. Government that governs least, promotes individual liberties, as well as growth economies.

Why county board attendance is falling off

By SHELLY GUGGENHEIM

If Wayne County gave a war, it's almost certain some generals would not show up.

Attendance at county board meetings is a spotty thing—sometimes seeming to hinge on caprice, pork barreling and lobbyist pressure.

That is not to say there aren't some stalwarts who attend meetings as a badge of honor.

It's just that after a roll call, the number of commissioners who stay through a meeting to the bitter end is a small band of the tried-and-true.

AT A MAY 2 meeting of the Special Ways and Means Committee dealing with the county's $8.8 million deficit, those who were present at the designated time had to wait more than an hour until 14 of the then-26 commissioners could be rounded up for a quorum.

With staff and labor leaders assembled, those present slogged through a complicated presentation by the head of Wayne County General Hospital only to come up with a vote indicating the quorum had dispersed.

Western Wayne County Commissioners Mary Dumas (R-Livonia) and Richard Manning (D-Redford Township) were absent. Commissioner

1-5/1974					1-4/1975
	Total	Present	Excused	Absent	Total	Present	Excused	Absent
Barr	75	71	1	3	36	35	0	1
Dumas	51	49	2	0	28	26	1	1
Manning	68	45	8	15	48	31	2	15
Smith	Elected November 1974				43	41	0	2
Taylor	64	61	3	0	31	23	6	2

John Barr (D-Dearborn Heights) was present for the roll call but left soon after. Only Royce Smith (D-Belleville) and Tom Taylor (D-Westland), who chaired the meeting, stayed until the meeting adjourned.

At the next meeting, May 8, all area commissioners were present; in fact, 20 members were counted at one point.

There were no fireworks celebrating the quorum, perhaps indicating the most long-winded of the commissioners had run out of steam.

IN GENERAL the number of meetings attended this year by commissioners has dropped substantially from the number last year.

Last year, commissioners were paid a base salary of $10,000 plus $30 per meeting up to a maximum of eight meetings a month. This totaled a tidy salary of $12,880 annually and a lot of "relevant" meetings.

This year the salary schedule was changed to provide a flat $14,000 a year for each commissioner; $17,500 for the board chairman; and $15,000 for the board vice chairman. This eliminates a lot of bookkeeping and "unnecessary" meetings.

eyeballing county attendance records shows most area commissioners are generally religious in their attendance with one exception.

That exception is Richard Manning, whose district includes Redford Township and part of Livonia. For roughly comparable periods in 1974 (January-May) and 1975 (January-April) Manning holds the board record for missing meetings. (See chart.)

Barr's district includes part of Westland, Mrs. Dumas', most of Livonia; Smith's, Plymouth and Canton Township; and Taylor's, Garden City and part of Westland.

While it is important to remember that attendance isn't everything, it is an important part of what taxpayers expect from their representatives—a voice and a vote.

Grandma Thornton's valentine forecasted landing on moon

One of my most treasured possessions is a Valentine my Grandma Thornton gave me in 1935. It pictures a crescent moon with two people climbing up a ladder to reach it. Even then, my grandmother believed that man someday would reach the moon, and she always wanted to get there herself. We used to joke about moon men who ate green cheese and drank apple juice.

The moon has always held a fascination for man. Nothing is more romantic or enchanting than moonlight. All of our ancestors, Greeks, Romans, Egyptians, Africans, and American Indians along with Western European witches, had countless myths and legends in which they personified the moon and called her, among other things, Luna, Diana, Artemis and Selene.

The moon generally was referred to as a woman because of the mystery surrounding it.

NOW, THE FACT that man has visited the moon has not lessened but increased our fascination with this silvery ever-changing nightly visitor who winks at us from behind a cloud.

Sometimes it hangs so low you can really believe that a cow might conceivably jump over it. And, it takes very little imagination to see a man's laughing face on the surface of the full moon.

The Man in the Moon looked out of the moon, Looked out of the moon and said, "It's time for all children on the earth To think about going to bed."

"My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon," "Blue Moon," "Shine on Harvest Moon," "Moonlight Becomes You," "Fly Me to the Moon,"...the list of songs about the moon is endless, a constant source of inspiration for the poets of all eras.

Then there are those who view the moon not as romantic and poetic but as spooky — bringing to mind all those wonderful spine-chilling tales of horror about werewolves, vampires and the like.

THE MOON, like the sun, rises in the east and sets in the west, but there the similarity ends; for, unlike the sun, its size and shape are constantly changing.

There are four quarters in the moon's cycle. Following the dark of the moon, when it is completely hidden from us (May 11 this year was the dark of the moon), it soon reappears as a slender crescent commonly called the "new moon" (although the dark of the moon is also called the new moon).

For the next seven days it waxes (grows) and reaches its first quarter (May 18). Seven days later it is full, round and beautiful, as it will be on May 25 this year. From this point on it will begin to diminish in size (called waning) until June 1, when only half of it will be visible as it enters its fourth and last quarter. On June 9 it will again be dark and the whole cycle will start anew.

In my grandmother's day no one (at least not in our household) ever did anything without first checking on the phase of the moon.

Grandma Thornton always said that if it was strong enough to pull the tides, it certainly had its effect upon everything else on this planet as well.

Crops were planted when the moon was waxing. This was also the time for casting spells for love, money and anything else you wanted to increase.

When the moon was waning it was a time to wind up one's business affairs, pull together loose ends, work spells to end romances, and whatever else you wanted finished and over.

The full moon was a time for harvesting, rejoicing and great good magic; and the dark of the moon for secret deeds best hidden from the eyes of others.

THERE IS an easy way to tell at a glance whether the moon is waxing or waning. As it waxes, its horns point east, and when it is waning, the horns point west.

The following folk rhyme is a guide to the rising of the moon:

A new moon rises with the sun,

Its waxing half at noon day shows;

The full moon climbs at sunset hour,

The waning half the midnight knows.

On May 25 this year, and again on November 15, there will be total eclipses. Witches regard these as good omens, indicating better times are in store. Since one of these, coupled with a full moon, falls on my birthday, I'm looking forward to an especially good summer. It should be generally good for everyone in this hemisphere.

When the moon wears a halo, or seems to have a circle around it, it is said a storm is coming and the number of days before the storm can be reckoned by counting the stars inside the circle.

My favorite lunar superstition is: When the new crescent appears in the sky, if you see it over your left shoulder you will have 30 days of misfortune. But, if you see it for the first time over your right shoulder, you will have 30 days of good luck. If you see it straight ahead, it means 30 days of hard work, which, in these days of unemployment, isn't so bad either.

Also, remember you can always wish on the new moon no matter where you first see it. And if you gaze at the moon each night during the complete lunar cycle (30 days) and repeat your wish, it is almost certain to come true, especially if you have the right person gazing at it with you.

Glenn takes first Wayne track meet

By TOM SCHRAM
Sports Editor

Westland John Glenn standout Tom Jakubowski is usually content to win his two hurdle events at any given meet and allow his talented teammates to pick up enough additional points to get the win for the Rockets. But last Saturday Jakubowski had to fill in for the absent Harry Polovino, anchoring two relays, and the Rockets won both events and held on to win the first annual Wayne Memorial Invitational track and field meet. Glenn won the event with 69 points over runner-up Ypsilanti's 67. Other area teams to score in the meet include Livonia Stevenson 730 points, Garden City East (20), Thurston (16), Livonia Bentley (15), Plymouth Salem (15), and Garden City West (12). "I was a little concerned about Polovino's absence. But this team has run together before and it was really a pleasant headache to have Jakubowski anchor," said Glenn coach Barry Basel. Jakubowski teamed with Frank DeLuca, Fred Shoemaker and Terry Bixler to win both the 440 and the 680 relays.

Glenn also took a first in the four mile relay when Tom Harris, Toby Theodore, Curt Cretal and Ted Unhold combined for an 18:36.4 clocking.

"That first didn't really surprise me. In fact they have run that relay a bit faster than that," said Basel.

Unhold was a few strides behind the leader (Garden City West which finished second) but went on to win the event by a whisker.

Jakubowski picked up a second for the Rockets in the high hurdles with a personal best time of 14.2, two-tenths of a second off the winning time.

Although that was Jakubowski's best clocking of the season, Basel said that he thought he could do better.

"He hit four hurdles in the race so I feel that he might have won it," Basel said.

Surprising Garden City East picked up two firsts for the day.

Denny Volz, Keith Sieczowski, Brian Dominic and Doug Sweazey combined for a first in the medley relay event, winning with a 10.8 second margin.

Art Kitz became only the second area thincad to break the nine and one-half minute barrier in the two mile run, going 9:29.9 to win the event easily. Teammate Sweazey broke that barrier last week.

Panther assistant coach Terry Cherry said that he had confidence that Kitz could run the distance in that time.

"Art is an exceptional runner and a fine young man," Cherry said.

Livonia Stevenson, which finished fifth in the meet, was the only other area school to post a first, winning the pole vault relay. Greg Johnson, Bob Broeder and Bruce Temby combined to vault 35-6 as the Spartans won the event over Taylor Center on fewer misses.

Stevenson also took a second, two thirds and a fourth to complete its scoring.

Thurston's Matt Whitehead just missed in the 100 yard dash, running a 10.1, for a second place, two-tenths of a second off the pace. Stevenson's Rick Hammell was third at 10.2 and Glenn's Terry Bixler was fifth in the same time.

Chargers ousted from state tourney

Defending champion Livonia Churchill was unceremoniously dumped from the Michigan High School Athletic Association Class A state baseball tournament by Livonia Stevenson, 4-2 in extra innings Tuesday in pre-district action at Livonia's Ford Field.

For Stevenson coach George VanWagoner and his ace pitcher John Kolis it was an act of revenge. Churchill edged the Spartans 1-0 in a similar pre-district game last year before the Chargers made their monumental tournament run which brought the first state team high school title to the city of Livonia.

Kolis was the loser in last year's game.

For Churchill coach Roger Frayer it was the end to his hopes of defending the title with a team that showed last year's brilliance only in scattered spurts.

Spartan catcher Tom Pacin, in the greatest moment of his prep career, blasted a one ball, two strike Dan Bobowski pitch over Ford's 334 foot left field fence with Randy Besh aboard in the ninth inning to settle the issue.

Pacin went three-for-four for the day picking up all four Stevenson RBIs.

Stevenson scored first in the fourth inning. Jim Snyder and Besh walked and Pacin followed with a hard single scoring Snyder.

Churchill took the lead in the fifth, scoring two disputed runs.

Franklin wins diamond pair

Livonia Franklin evened its baseball record at 9-9 as the Patriots swept a doubleheader from Ypsilanti Saturday, 3-2 and 13-0.

The first game was an extra inning affair which ended in the eighth when JoJo Scarpace singled, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored on Jerry Pollard's slow roller to shortstop.

That play came to the plate but the speedy Scarpace scored standing up.

Franklin had scored twice in the fourth when Jerry Pollard walked and Tim Hollandsworth, Darrell Gunter and Joe Pollard followed with base hits.

It was no contest in the second game as Franklin scored early and often to settle the issue quickly.

The Patriots tallied one in the second and five in the third on a walk, two singles, a double and two Ypsilanti errors. Dan Pederson drove in two runs in that inning.

Franklin picked up four more in the fourth on singles by Larry Urban, Jerry Pollard, Hollandsworth, Nelson Yanick and Sam Williams.

Urban went three-for-five for the game and Yanick, Williams and Pederson had two hits each.

Scarpace got the shutout for the Patriots, striking out seven, walking three and raising his record to 2-0.

Thurston split, East sweep logjams race

Good coaching philosophy is to take games "one at a time" and Redford Thurston baseball coach Emil Majeski wishes his team could do just that. The Eagles sport a 10-5 record overall but four of the five losses have come in doubleheader play. Last Friday the DH jinx hit again as Thurston split a Northwest Suburban pair with Livonia Franklin, winning the first game 9-3 and dropping the nightcap 7-4. The split kept the Eagles atop the league with an 8-2 record, one game ahead of Garden City East and Oak Park.

THURSTON jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first game when Jeff Krzywada started the game with a walk, advanced on a Patriot error, took third on a fielder's choice and came home when Dennis Kuschel reached base on another error. Mitch Drozdowski then walked and Brian D'Ascenzo picked up two RBIs with a long triple to right-center field.

Franklin came back for two in the second when Mark Saia walked, was sacrificed to second and came home on Joe Polard's hit.

Polard moved all the way to third on an errant pick-off attempt and came home on Bill Longeway's squeeze bunt.

Thurston got one back in its half of the second when Dave Beebe singled, moved up on Randy Kroll's sacrifice and scored on Krzywada's hit.

The Eagles picked up two runs without a hit in the fourth, scoring on three Franklin errors, a walk and a stolen base.

BOB BESSONEN reached first in the fifth on another Patriot error and scored on Kroll's single after he had stolen second.

Thurston wrapped things up with two runs in the sixth. Mark Purkiss singled. Randy Rodriguez walked and Kuschel hit an RBI double.

Rodriguez scored on a fielder's choice. Franklin scored the final run of the game in the seventh when Sam Williams tripled and came home on JoJo Scarpace's single.

Rodriguez went the distance for Thurston, striking out six and walking two while picking up his fourth win in as many outings.

THURSTON played "instant replay" in the first inning of the second game, again scoring three times.

DRC

SUNDAY FLORASCOPE BY EARL FLORA

DRC thoroughbred owner Theresa Abahazy is a firm disciple of the old adage that music hath charms to soothe the savage beast. Several of her horses have had FM radios or stereos rigged in their stalls, including Azule Marino who kicked up his heels at her Bach and Mozart tapes but got that real contented look when she finally tried plain everyday jazz. It's also true that many grooms rely on pocket transistors when walking and settling down a horse after a hard workout on the track. . . . Veteran DRC race announcer Jack Riggs, rated one of the tops in the business, has nothing but sympathy for Chick Anderson and his miscall of the Kentucky Derby stretch run. "In 30 years I've never had the misfortune," Riggs says, "But you live with the possibility everyday." . . . Gold lined DRC will look like Sutter's Mill starting June 7 when it offers purses totaling $285,000 for the Frontier Handicap, the Michigan Mile, the Michigan Oaks, the Dowling Memorial and the Michigan Futurity. Over a quarter of a million dollars for five races in 32 days! . . . Speaking of the $100,000 Michigan Mile . . . the country's biggest race on June 21 . . . Reserved seats can be ordered now thru June 1 by mailing your check to Detroit Race Course, P.O. Box 2529, Livonia, Mi. 48151 . . . Clubhouse admission and seat is $4.00 and Grandstand admission and seat is a mere $3.00 . . . This Saturday, May 17, DRC will feature a $15,000 Handicap and Sunday's feature race is the $10,000 WJR Radio 76 Handicap . . . 18-year-old Debbie Jared of Warren, learning at DRC to become an exercise girl, says the toughest thing in riding a thoroughbred is getting cramped leg muscles used to the very short stirrups. "Now I know how a bird feels when he's perched on a telegraph wire," she reports . . . the big DRC mile track is now fast rounding into midseason form; when the 4-year-old colt Thermos Bomb recently flew over the five furlongs in :58.2 he was just 3/5ths of a second off the track record for the distance . . . DRC racing secretary Tom Dorsey is already turning his scouts loose after horses who can measure up to the $100,000 Michigan Mile and One Eighth, annual DRC classic upcoming on Sat., June 21. There have been many Kentucky Derby horses in the "Mile" in the past, although it can be a real pressure grind for a 3-year-old.

Top ranked Chiefs rally to oust Catholic Central

FRED CRISSEY

According to Fred Crissey, baseball coach at Plymouth Canton High School, when you're No. 1, you still have your problems.

"Our basic fault all year has been lack of concentration early," said the head man of the top rated Michigan Class A diamond squad.

And it was exactly that problem that put the Chiefs in a big hole in the first inning against Detroit Catholic Central Saturday before Canton fought back to take a 9-5 victory.

The Shamrocks tallied all five of their runs in the first inning on five hits, two walks and a Chief error. Mark Perkins took the shelling for the Chiefs.

But Canton bounced back for two runs in the bottom of the first as Brian Sternberger doubled, Tom Close was safe on an error, and Mike Verduce loaded the bases with a single.

Paul Major then doubled, driving in two.

Major started the Canton third inning rally which brought the Chiefs to within a run.

Major singled and Scott Dunagan beat out a bunt. Howell walked and John Young followed with a two-run single.

Canton took the lead for good in the fourth when Catholic Central balked in one run and another scored on a fielder's choice.

The Chiefs wrapped matters up in the fifth when Verduce, Major and Dave Pink all hit RBI singles.

The non-league victory gave the Chiefs a 13-2 record on the year. John Young recorded the victory in relief of Perkins with Canton ace Bill Parson working the final two innings.

Two year wait ends -- Rocks take dual meet

The two year dual meet drought for the Plymouth Salem track team ended last week when the Rocks bested Livonia Bentley 64-59 in Suburban Eight action.

"Of course I'm pleased. It's always a good feeling to win. But we don't let our losses in dual meets affect us that much because we won," said Rock coach Gary Balconi.

The victory gives Salem a 1-4 record after a winless 1974 season.

Mark DeMeritt continued his outstanding performances for the Rocks, winning the 220 and 440 yard runs.

Kim Woody vaulted 13-4.5 in the pole vault to easily outdistance all competition and Ted Burton, Mark Manthey and Rick Gladstone swept the shot put for Salem.

Rick Hammill won the 100 yard dash for the Bulldogs and finished first in the 220 in a dead heat with DeMeritt.

Young jocks vie for DRC riding lead

With the absence this season of veteran riders Larry Snyder and Glen Brogan, youth in the Detroit Race Course jockey colony is really having its fling.

A handsome color television set awaits the jockey who has won the most races when the DRC curtain comes down on Sunday, July 13, and 22-year-old Sam Maple and 21-year-old Mike Morgan are riding as though they want to use it to set up house-keeping.

So, too, is Cuban-born Ramon Perez, 27, who currently enjoys a slight lead over Maple and Morgan because he was on hand for the beginning of the DRC season and has ridden some 50 more horses. The younger jockeys had to finish racing assignments elsewhere before reporting to the big Livonia mile track.

It is not likely that any of the youthful horsemen will reach the North American record of 162 wins posted by Snyder at DRC in 1973, nor even the 102 victories logged by "Preacher" Brogan last year. But the current jockey crop will more than make up for that with their red hot race for the title. With all three contenders averaging five and six rides a day, the battle is expected to extend through the very last hours of the season.

AS THE DRC SUMMER meeting closed in on the halfway mark Tuesday, Perez led the chase with 34 riding triumphs. Maple, the best percentage rider in camp with 81 in-the-money finishes in 144 starts, had 25 victories, while Morgan showed 19.

Both Maple and Morgan, the latter an apprentice jockey, became famous for their hot streaks at DRC last year; track railbirds know the three man jockey race is even closer than it looks.

In addition to their much-appreciated winning habits, all three riders are also among the most colorful and popular at DRC.

"Escaping" Cuba with his family in the 1950's, the well educated Perez is voluntarily teaching some of the Puerto Rican and South American jockeys at DRC to speak better English. He's holding regular evening classes at his home in Detroit.

The handsome Maple, who lost a ride in the Preakness last year when his scheduled mount Friendly Bee died suddenly, is already being compared to his older brother Eddie by DRC trackside. Eddie Maple has enjoyed national riding stature for the past half dozen years.

In only his third year on the track after riding nothing more than plow horses and big draft horses at the family farm in Nebraska, Morgan has been quickly excellent enough to hook on as the No. 1 rider for Michigan's powerful Sandera Farm at Metamora.

"Mike is very young yet, and new at the game, but he can already make a horse talk," testifies Sandera proprietor J. V. Sanders.

In The Pocket

By W.W. EDGAR

Thanks to an unusually large number of mixed leagues, bowling will more than hold its own in the competition with golf, tennis and the various racquet clubs during the summer months.

A survey taken during the past week reveals that, aside from the usual mixed leagues of four-member teams, there is a trend toward couples bowling. This is especially true for weekends where some of the area establishments report more participation than in other years.

Most establishments are working on a schedule of at least one full league "across the house" during the week with the couples groups taking over on the weekends.

"From the many inquiries we have had," one of the proprietors stated, "the lag in the economy is helping us. It shows that more folks will be staying home this summer during vacation time and they'll be having their fun bowling."

This is a far cry from the old days—before the automatic pinsetter and air conditioning—when bowling was considered an eight month sport and the establishments closed for the summer.

IT'S TOO BAD the record books are limited to cold statistics and don't tell the human interest stories behind the winning of championships.

For instance, there should be a note explaining the drama that marked the victory of the Amway team in the recently completed Detroit women's city tournament at Satellite Bowl.

The drama was provided by Donna Jo Kowalski, captain of the team, who lives on the far east side of the city. On the day the team bowled, she was half way to Satellite Bowl in Dearborn Heights when she discovered she had forgotten her bowling ball. There was nothing to do, but return home, get the ball and race for the lanes.

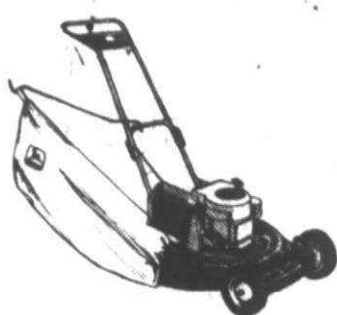

That's what she did, arriving just as the final notes of the Star Spangled Banner were sung. Then she led her team to handicap count of 3102 that eventually was good enough to win the title.

ANN SETLOCK, former "Queen" of the women bowlers, played a strange role this week when her teammates and more than 20 other members of the all-star leagues competed in the Queens Tournament, one of the features of the WIBC event at Indianapolis.

Ann was a spectator instead of a competitor and she was "rooting" for her mates to win the top honor. Day manager at Garden Lanes, Ann has been handicapped by a bad back and bowling daily for the entire week is out of the question.

"If I tried that," she said, "I wouldn't be able to walk for a week." IT'S RATHER difficult to keep Jim Hamlin out of the headlines at Farmington Lanes. In the Teen Classic last week he showed the way with a 210 in 588.

Lower mortgage interest rates may be short-lived

Realtors across the nation are concerned that the current dual attraction of plentiful mortgage funds and lowered interest rates in the housing market may be short-lived.

Reports already are filtering in from some areas that mortgage interest rates have ended a three-month dip and are starting to edge upward again. Indications from most other areas are that the rates have bottomed out with increases expected to be needed to meet competition from other borrowers before long.

The big worry appears to center on governments' growing need to finance deficits which may mount as high as $50 billion at the federal level alone.

"WE ARE HOPING that we don't run into a repeat of last year's situation that saw massive withdrawal of funds from mortgage financing institutions for investment in higher-yield government securities," states Jerry J. Rozema, president of the United Northwestern Realty Association (UNRA).

"The real estate industry is showing signs of recovery from the 1974 'tight money' market. But if it goes the same way again, we'll be hard-pressed to find mortgage funds for qualified borrowers at affordable rates."

Rozema said that, with the present economic crunch, house prices have remained fairly stable over the past three quarters. But a cycle of rising prices dictated by increased costs will likely emerge in the second half.

Buyers who have been following trends apparently have spotted this and are moving now to take advantage of the present "buyers market." Since mid-April, sales persons have recorded a substantial increase in sales and a sharp rise in the number of people looking to buy.

LOCALLY, lending institutions on large measure have rebuilt their depleted supplies of mortgage funds. Nearly everyone seems to feel that lending rates are about at the minimum that can be expected.

Pest Of The WEEK

Sycamore Anthracnose, is a fungus leaf and twig disease. Leaves wilt, often causing the complete loss of the first set of leaves. Twigs and small branches will be killed back and small cankers will appear at the base of the twigs.

Powdery mildew is often associated with the anthracnose in early spring. When the leaves are fully developed another phase of the disease appears, causing triangular brown areas in the leaves which eventually cause browning and death of the entire leaf.

Infected leaves fall throughout the summer.

CONTROL: Spray as leaf buds swell in the spring of the year with Bordeaux, Cyprex, or fixed copper sprays (Basicop, Copper A, Cupro K, Coposol, Cuprocide). If temperatures during leaf initiation fall below 55 degrees F, expect to apply a total of three applications 10 to 14 days apart.

Regular fertilization of sycamores helps to lessen the damage to trees.

(PART IV)

For three years—from 1957 through 1960—the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra performed a series of open air concerts during the summer months on the estate of the late Dr. Ralph Pino.

Pino, a patron of the arts and crafts, owned a farm west of Plymouth, near the junction of Ann Arbor Road and Ann Arbor Trail. He invited the orchestra to play by the side of the pond on his property.

Dr. Pino, whose practice was in Detroit, was one of the most famous eye surgeons in the United States. He had set up his "Plymouth Colony Farms" as a center for experiments in fruit growing, poultry raising and the propagation of various wool-producing sheep to supply the colony's weaving industry. The experiment, a minor-scale Utopian enterprise of the Brook Farm variety, died with Dr. Pino several years ago. The property is now a condominium site.

TWENTY YEARS AGO, however, the terrain and atmosphere at the farm were ideal for open air concerts. Adjacent to the pond was a natural amphitheatre, formed by a grassy slope which ran down to the willow-bordered body of water, often frequented by a mother duck and her large brood of waddling offspring.

Not far away, in the corner of a wood, was a log cabin which Dr. Pino had named "Walden" in honor of Thoreau, the New England nature-lover, who had made his pond in Massachusetts famous by his experiments in hermit-like living on its shores in the 1850s.

When Dr. Pino invited the orchestra to use the property, supporters of the orchestra immediately went to work to build a bandstand beside the pond. Volunteer workers gave up their weekends to drive piles, install floorings, and erect a canvas canopy to serve as a sound reflector.

THE VENTURE was an outstanding artistic and social success. Appreciative audiences enjoyed the pastoral scenery as well as the symphonic music. Some performances drew crowds as large as 2,000. Sixty per cent of the audience came from outside Plymouth. Eventually, however, the Colony Concerts came to an end when the Symphony Society, faced with a financial choice between regular season and summer concerts, chose the former.

The three-year summer interlude was enjoyed, and is fondly remembered, by those who were fortunate to have attended the outdoor performances. Those who made the experience possible have a right to be proud of their parts in the undertaking.

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra is also proud of the accomplishments of many of its "alumni." Among the former members of the local orchestra who have made good in other pastures are: a member of the Metropolitan Orchestra, a singer with the Philadelphia Orchestra, and the dean of the school of music at the University of California.

HIGHLIGHTS IN the history of the Plymouth Symphony were noted in the "Plymouth Observer" in May 1970. They include:

1951: Family concerts inaugurated.
1955-56: Mozart's 200th anniversary observed, with probably the first complete performance in America of his "Coronation Mass," K. 317. In the same year, the Symphony presented

"Hansel and Gretel," the first opera performed in Plymouth.

1956-57: First "pops" concert presented.

1957-58: The Michigan Orchestra Association held its first two-day convention in Plymouth. During that year, Emily Mutter Austin became concertmaster after the death of Josef Lazaroff.

1957-60: Summer "Colony Concerts" were presented, as referred to earlier.

1960-61: The orchestra presented the first Plymouth performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony.

1961-62: Grant Williams Chorale, now the Kenneth Jewell Chorale, was organized in Plymouth and first appeared with the orchestra.

1962-62: The Turnau Opera Company production of "Barber of Seville" was presented, followed by "LaBoheme" the next year.

1965-66: The 20th anniversary of the orchestra was highlighted by a performance of William Walton's "Belshazzar's Feast" by the Jewell Chorale.

1966-67: The orchestra performed in Detroit's Ford Auditorium for the Music Educator's National Conference.

1967-68: Mischa Mischakoff played Beethoven's violin concerto and Paul Doktor played Berlioz's "Harold in Italy."

1968-69: "The Messiah" was performed by the Jewell Chorale and the Brahms violin concerto by Millard Taylor.

The Plymouth Symphony is said to be the largest community orchestra in Michigan. Plymouth is reputed to be the smallest city in the entire state to maintain a civic orchestra.

OUTSIDERS have noted that the Plymouth Symphony is "able to perform the most elaborately-scored works ever composed - from Berlioz to Brahms to Hindemith." Music critics from Detroit and from other metropolitan cities have often commented on the high level of the orchestra's programs.

Of the more than 1,200 "community" or "civic" symphony orchestras in the United States, composed largely of music-loving amateur, non-professional performers, the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra undoubtedly is superior to most.

For that the residents of Plymouth have to thank Paul Wagner, who organized the orchestra in 1946; Wayne Dunlap, who joined the group in 1951, and who brought it to its present state of excellence; the artistic skill the members have acquired by working together for almost three decades; and our fortunate proximity to several major universities, and to the Detroit Symphony, giving us access to some of the best amateur and professional talent in the midwest, and perhaps in the nation.

AAUW selects announcer for bicentennial tape

PLYMOUTH—Jay Cunningham has been selected to narrate the bicentennial tape "Heritage, Happenings, Hopes" presently being produced by the Plymouth Branch of the American Association of University Women.

He was selected from a field of 19 contestants during auditions held May 8 at Plymouth Salem High School.

Currently serving as manager of education and training at Chrysler Corporation's General Manufacturing Division, Cunningham worked professionally as a radio and television announcer before joining the company 10 years ago. He has been a resident of Plymouth Township for a little more than a year.

Cunningham said he decided to audition for the program because, "It sounded like a way to become involved in my new community by doing something I really enjoy."

First alternate selected at the narration auditions was Mike Di Cuirci, a teacher at Central Middle School. The announcer for the Centennial Park Band, Salem High School senior Bob DeLano, was selected as second alternate. He is an announcer with student radio station WSDP-FM.

Shooting has already begun on the 30-minute bicentennial production and the narration will be recorded in June. The tape will be shown to the public in the Dunning-Hough Library during the Fall Festival in September and will be available for viewing by school and community groups throughout 1976.

Muscular dystrophy drive is set

Counteers of the Muscular Dystrophy Association will conduct a door-to-door campaign from May 15 to June 15 in the Plymouth-Canton area, seeking funds to support an all-out research attack against the crippling disease.

Persons willing to help in the fund-raising campaign may call the association office in Ferndale or local 1975 volunteer chairpersons Don and Kathy Fulkerson, 201 N. Mill, Plymouth, 0.

Funds from the drive are earmarked for research and provision of clinical and patient services.

Muscular dystrophy has stricken some 250,000 Americans, most of them children. The disease is usually fatal.

Neither the cause of the disease nor an effective treatment has yet been found.

The small Cadillac awaits first market test

By DAN McCOSH

The airy world of the prestige car normally remains removed from the sales pitches aimed at the mass markets.

When an east coast banker remarked, "If you are worried about the price of gas, you can't afford a yacht," he also made the definitive statement about a luxury car.

Worry about the price of gas would probably mean you couldn't afford a Seville, either.

Introduced at a national press conference in Southfield last week, the new "international size" Cadillac is a step into deeper water for the only automotive division in the Big Three generally doing well in this year of the big sales slump.

The smallest car in the Cadillac lineup, at $12,500-plus it is one of the most expensive. It is 27 inches shorter, eight inches narrower and almost 1,000 pounds lighter than the 1975 Cadillac Sedan DeVille.

Although the projected mileage is approximately 19 miles per gallon, economy is not expected to be its strong selling point.

CADILLAC GENERAL Manager Edward C. Kennard mentioned "Mercedes" numerous times during the introduction ceremonies, including saying an abortive attempt had been made to furnish a Mercedes 450 SE as a comparison.

He also made a point to mention the car had been under development over four years, "long before the current energy and economic problems had become apparent."

The car is aimed at what appears to be a growing segment of the luxury car market—those looking for a compact, five-passenger, but obviously expensive automobile.

Imports such as the Mercedes sedans, the Jaguar sedan, BMW and Rolls Royce have been built with smaller wheelbases and significantly higher prices than American luxury cars.

Marketing of some of these cars, particularly Mercedes and Jaguar, alludes to the good handling qualities of the cars.

A short film narrated by Kennard featured footage of the new Seville negotiating the turns at a race track in California.

Kennard mentioned some advance ads were "different" than the usual Cadillac presentation, but was no more specific.

A smaller car for more money? Kennard was confident the price was right. "The price reflects our normal practices of adding a reasonable profit to the cost of production and development," he said.

But later he mentioned some dealers had objected to the price, which was substantially less than the highest-price imports. Some buyers, apparently, wanted to be sure to drive the most expensive.

Kennard both raised and countered this argument by saying Cadillac wanted to be sure to maintain a high resale value on the used-car market, something the imports have not always been able to do.

IS THE CAR a trend setter? It features a 350 cubic inch electronically fuel injected engine, which may eventually drift down to the rest of the GM line, but "it's expensive," according to Kennard.

All Cadillacs will probably get smaller, "along with the rest of the full-sized cars," he added. Robert Templin, head of engineering for Cadillac, outlined a new testing system, which allowed the design to be tooled and the old El Dorado Assembly plant prepared for the new car in 16 months.

Testing and tuning the chassis was also done in a record time using a new method of computer analysis.

DRIVING THE CAR gives the impression of a solid, good-handling sedan, although it is not a sports car.

The engineering attention paid to noise suppression paid off with an extremely quiet car. The interior appointments are luxurious, with a fine attention to detail, including a polite chime rather than the noisy seat-belt buzzer.

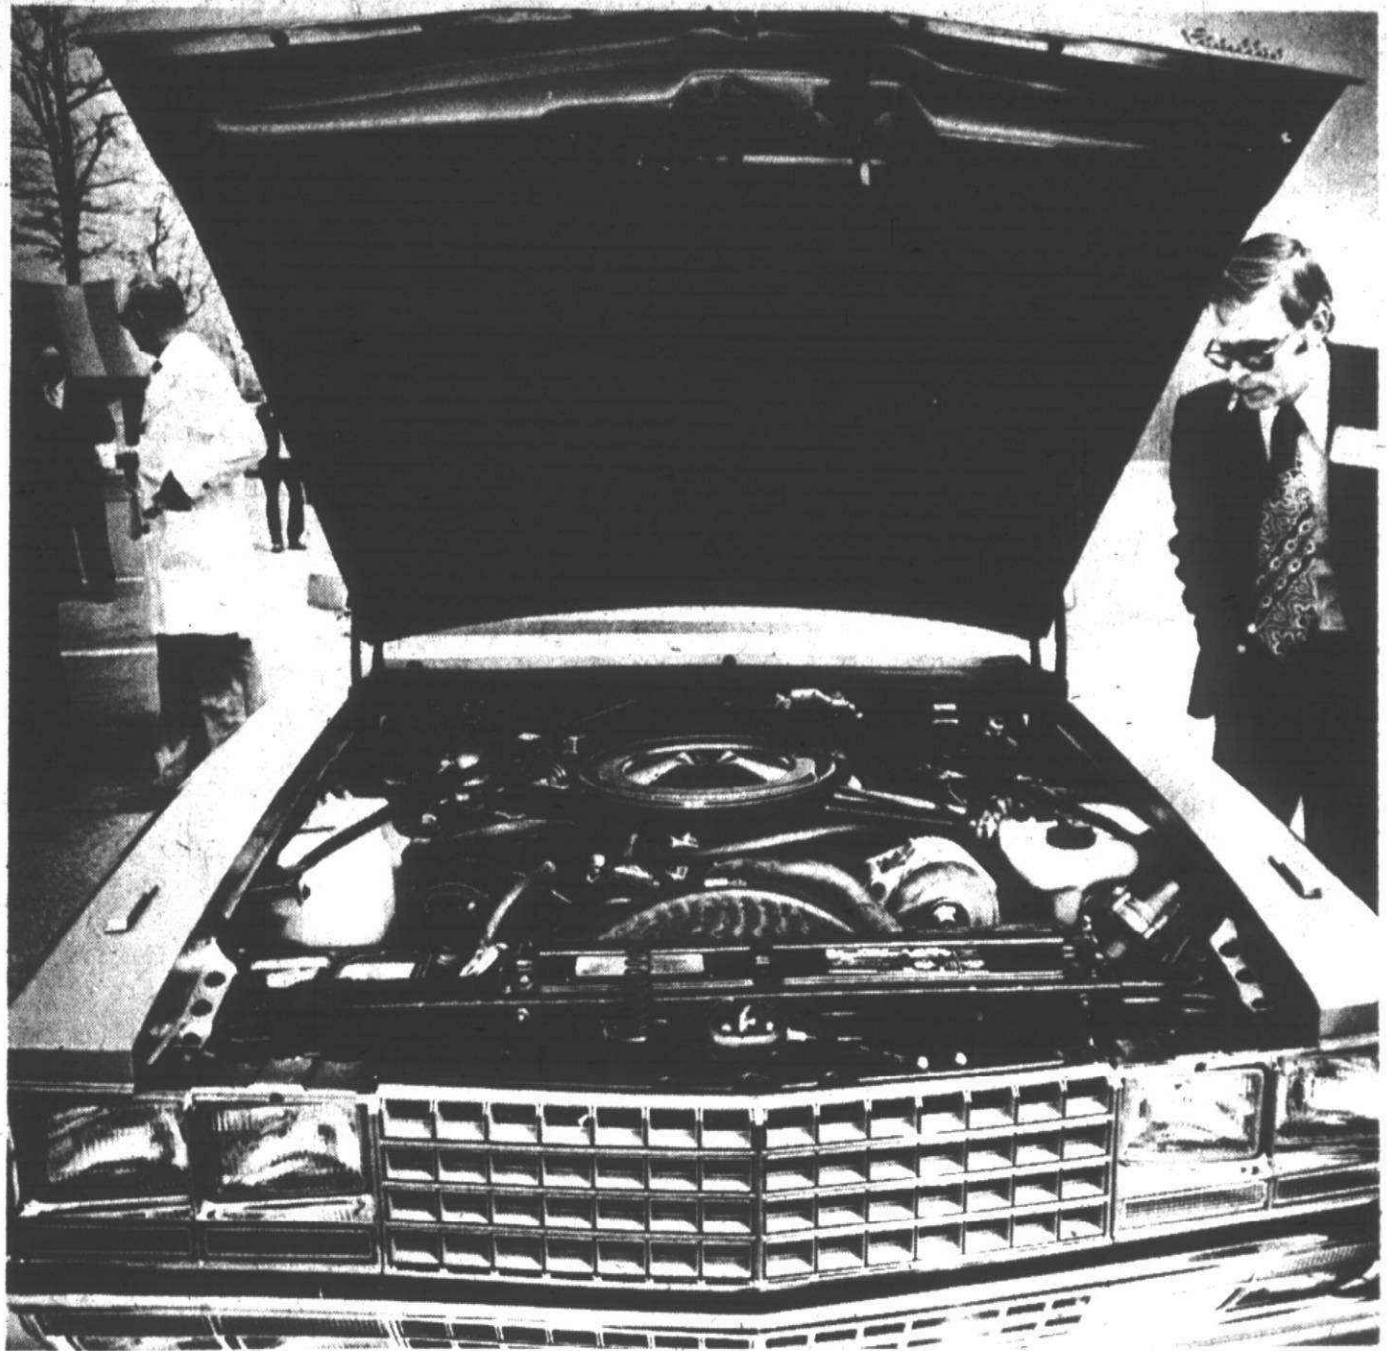

Area dealers are enthusiastic. Chuck Audette, of Audette Cadillac in West Bloomfield, says he took his first order last October, from a buyer who had never seen the car.

A limited run of 2,000 cars, all a silver-grey, is expected in dealerships by May 1, but most are already ordered.

Audette says he has 18 orders. "The availability of parts is one strong selling point...customers say they sometimes wait six months for delivery from overseas," Audette said.

Ray West, of Wilson-Crissman Cadillac in Birmingham, also had back orders. "A lot of people have been waiting for this car," he added. He felt the price was "competitive" with the market. "It's another Cadillac," he added when asked whether it felt different selling a small car.

Although the marketing plans include overseas sales, according to Kennard, "our dealers come first," and only about 15 have been designated for shipment abroad at the present time.

The new Seville features a fuel injection engine.

Seville hasn't hurt here

"The new Seville shouldn't effect the sale of any of our other models because we are aiming at the import market," says Bill Knight who is public relations director of the Cadillac Co.

"As a matter of fact, we are looking upon it as the 10th model in our series. This is a different car for a different market and shouldn't hurt our sales a bit.

"We are aiming our sales promotion at the owners of such cars as the Mercedes and hope to reduce the number of imports."

ED PROBUR, head salesman in the Don Massey salesroom on Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth, commented, "We are not soliciting our regular customers," in discussing the role to be played by the Seville.

"We are concentrating on the owners of European luxury cars and the response is surprising. We even heard from a man in Newport News, Va., who always has been a luxury car owner.

"The Seville fits nicely into our program because it gives us an entry into a competitive class. More than that, we are attracting the type of purchaser who always wants one of the first of any model."

The only Cadillac dealer in the western Wayne County area, the Massey company officials, including Don Massey, explain that sales are up almost 25 per cent over a year ago. Massey sees this as a sign the Seville will not cut into regular sales of other years.

Wisconsin synod marks 125th anniversary

REPRESENTING WISCONSIN SYNOD LUTHERAN churches with a combined age of 321 years are (from left), the Rev. Robert Baer of St. John church of Westland, the Rev. Winfred Koelpin of St. Paul church of Livonia and the Rev. Leonard Koeninger of St. Peter church in Plymouth. The three, who will attend a 125th anniversary program Sunday in Plymouth Salem High School, are looking at an aerial view of the former building of St. Paul church, now the Livonia Senior Citizens headquarters. (Staff photo by Bob Woodring)

Lutherans from six Wisconsin Synod churches in this area will join Sunday, May 18 in a special service in the auditorium of Plymouth Salem High School to mark the synod's 125th anniversary.

The service is scheduled at 4 p.m. and will feature a talk by a well-known theologian, Dr. Siegfert Becker, as well as music by massed choirs of children and adults.

The officiant will be the Rev. Leonard Koeninger, pastor of St. Peter church in Plymouth, and one of the choir directors will be Mrs. Vera Schuessler, who leads music at St. Paul church in Livonia.

St. Peter and St. Paul churches, with histories going back 119 and 103 years, are almost as old as the mother synod. Nearing the century mark is St. John, a Westland congregation.

The other churches in this area sharing in the celebration are Peace of Livonia, Our Savior of Westland and Lola Park of Redford Township.

There are 20 other Wisconsin Synod churches in Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties joining in the celebration. One of them, Salem church of Ann Arbor, even pre-dates the formation of the synod and has marked its 142nd anniversary.

THE EARLY HISTORY of the Wisconsin Synod goes back to the Milwaukee area. In the decade around 1850, there were 71 independent Lutheran synods in existence, and the Wisconsin synod was one of the smallest.

Only five pastors, representing 18 congregations, were present at Granville, Wis. (now Milwaukee), when the synod was organized formally. Despite these small beginnings, the synod is one of only two that have survived to the present bearing their founding names. The rest of the early ones have merged or vanished.

With steady growth, accelerated in the last two decades, the church body now numbers more than 1,000 congregations in 40 states and Canada.

FROM ITS BEGINNING, the Wisconsin Synod was deeply committed to Christian education both on the congregational and synodical level.

Today more than 250 of its congregations, including several of the local ones, operate Christian day schools, and the synod is working on plans to open Huron Valley Lutheran High School in Wayne County in the fall of this year.

The 26 congregations in this area have about 6,000 members, and up to a thousand of them are expected to be on hand for the anniversary service in Plymouth Salem, located at 46181 Joy, Plymouth.

Local clergy attending, in addition to Pastor Koeninger, will be the Rev. W. A. Koelpin of St. Paul, the Rev. Robert Baer of St. John, the Rev. Robert P. Mueller of Peace and the Rev. Edward Zell of Lola Valley.

Dr. Becker, the speaker for the day, is a teacher in the synod's seminary at Mequon, Wis.

BETHEL MISSIONARY ASSEMBLY OF GOD, 8900 Middle Belt, Livonia, will present John Wesley Fletcher in a series of evangelistic meetings from Sunday, May 18 through Friday, May 30.

The services will be held Sundays at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., and other days at 7:30 p.m. Evangelist Fletcher stresses the themes of compassion and praise in the crusades he has held in the east and midwest. He contends both are necessary "in combating the forces which chain the lives of people with fear, disease and mental depression."

NEWBURG UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, 36500 Ann Arbor Trail, Livonia, will present the Rev. Bob Morley, United Methodist minister and traveling evangelist from the Southern California Conference, in his third visit to the church on Sunday, May 18. The minister, folk singer and contemporary evangelist will lead services at 9:30 and 11 a.m. and then will be heard in concert at 7 p.m.

MEMORIAL CHURCH OF CHRIST, 35475 Five Mile, Livonia, will offer an eight-week session on "Grief and Mourning" beginning Wednesday, May 21 at 7 p.m.

The series is open to all in the community, with those who recently have lost a mate or child especially invited. There is a $25 charge.

MERRIMAN ROAD BAPTIST CHURCH, Merriman south of Ford, Garden City, will be the setting for a concert by the Servants Gospel Quartet Saturday, May 17 at 8 p.m. The Baptist Men of the church are sponsoring the concert.

RICE MEMORIAL UNITED METHODIST CHURCH, 20601 Beech Daly, Redford Township, will sponsor a square dance open to the community Friday, May 16 from 7:30 to 11 p.m.

There will be a professional caller who specializes in calling for beginners and refreshments will be served. Tickets are $1.50. The church asks that no hard sole shoes be worn for dancing.

WARD UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, 17000 Farmington Road, Livonia, will present all of its six choirs in a concert of popular sacred music Sunday, May 18 at 7 p.m.

Featured to begin the program will be three groups of children: Cherub Choir directed by Mrs. Conrad Behler; Primary Choir under Mrs. Maxwell Down; and the Junior Choir led by Mrs. Robert Rabias.

Also on the program will be the New Action Singers, directed by Mrs. Dan Schar, presenting music used in a recent weekend retreat, the Teen Choir with music from Billy Graham films and the Chancel Choir, under Dr. Jerry Smith, with a variety of gospel songs. Dr. Smith directs the teen and chancel groups.

Also on the weekend Ward calendar will be a visit by Dave Edwards, gospel recording artist and music coordinator for the Hiawatha Youth Camp in northern Michigan; a youth rally Sunday during church school hours; and a kickoff for Vacation Bible School plans during morning worship Sunday. Dr. Bartless L. Hess will speak on the subject "The Child in the Middle."

SOUTH REDFORD CHURCH OF CHRIST, 26505 West Chicago, will host the Gloria Choir, a women's chorus from Lincoln Christian College in Illinois, in a sacred concert Monday, May 19 at 7:30 p.m.

The choir, directed by Thomas O. Myers, is touring the midwest and Canada and will present traditional anthems, contemporary music and testimony on the quality of life as a Christian.

UNITED ASSEMBLY OF GOD, 42021 Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth, will present The Son People, a group of young people from the Lansing area, in a concert Sunday, May 18 at 7 p.m.

Prayer breakfast—a first

DR. GEORGE E. GULLEN JR., president of Wayne State University, was speaker for Livonia's first Prayer Breakfast, which brought some 250 civic, religious and community leaders to Madonna College May 13. Sister Mary Danatha, Madonna president shown seated to the right of the speaker, presided, and several local leaders took part in the program. Sister Danatha expressed hope at the close of the program that "the fatherhood of God that we have affirmed today shall lead us to the brotherhood of man." (Staff photo by Art Emanuel)

Oakway soloists highlight open concert

The Oakway Symphony Orchestra will play an open rehearsal, Monday, May 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Redford Theater, 17630 Lahser near Grand River. The rehearsal is free and open to the public.

Paul Amarello of Redford Township on the English horn, will join Harold Kacanek of Southfield on the trumpet.

performing Aaron Copland's "Quiet City."

Di Blasi has announced that members of the Oakway may receive college credit at Madonna, Marygrove and Mercy colleges, Oakland Community College and University of Detroit. Those interested in auditioning for the orchestra may write to Oakway Symphony, Box 171, Farmington, or call Madonna College, 36600 Schoolcraft, Livonia.

The Theater revives musical 'Godspell'

The orchestra, under the direction of Francesco Di Blasi, will accompany soloists Rosemary Jackson, soprano, and Fat Bob Taylor, the singing plumber, baritone, in selections from Richard Rodgers "South Pacific."

Due to popular demand, The Theater of the University of Detroit-Marygrove College presents "Godspell." Created by John-Michael Tebbel and containing music and new lyrics by Stephen Schwartz, "Godspell" will reopen Saturday, May 24 for a limited run of 10 shows. Performances are May 24 and May 31 at 2 and 8 p.m.; May 25 and June 1 at 2 and 7:30 p.m., and May 29 and 30 at 8:30 p.m. All performances will be in The Theater on the Marygrove College campus, McNichols at Wyoming in northwest Detroit.

Under the direction of Dominic Misimi, the cast will once again stage this highly theatrical exposition of song, dance, magic tricks and mime based on the gospel according to St. Matthew. Christ and his 12 apostles romp through parables, gospels and other biblical events, beginning with Christ's baptism and ending with his death and resurrection.

Tickets for "Godspell" are $3.50 regular and $2.50 for students and senior citizens. Group rates are available. For reservations call the performing arts box office.

Bettas attract area fish enthusiasts

The Betta Bets of Michigan will hold a show of Betta Splendens (Siamese Fighting Fish) May 17-19 in Livonia Mall, Seven Mile and Middle Belt roads.

The show will feature more than 500 entries from the United States and Canada and may attract fish from as far away as Thailand, according to show organizers.

The show, the club's first sanctioned event, will be in the center mall, 5 to 9 p.m. Friday, 9:30 to 9 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

A LOCAL Betta raiser is Evelyn Cohen, a biology teacher at Clarenceville High School in Livonia. Mrs.

Cohen's tanks aren't active presently, but she hopes "to start restocking again soon."

She was a founding member of the Betta club and has served as club auctioneer several times in the past.

The Betta fish is known for two characteristics, the fighting ability of the male and the color varieties in combination with long feathery fins.

The club is concerned with displaying the fish.

"The Betta is native to the rice paddies of Cambodia and Thailand," explains Mrs. Cohen. "They are easy to care for and, because of the adaptation of an air chamber in their head, can breathe surface air, and can be kept in a variety of containers."

"Their diet includes mosquitos and other live aquatic insects. Their tanks require no landscaping or gravel."

ONE OF THREE judges at the show is Walt Maurus of Livonia. He is a founding member of the International Betta Congress and presently teaches art at Cleveland and Cooper Elementary schools in Livonia.

"Fish are judged by observation for color quality, fin formation and liveliness," says Maurus.

Trophies will be awarded and class competition also will be judged. Joining Maurus on the judges panel will be Stan Smith of Columbus, Ohio, and Jim Sonnier, apprentice judge from Louisiana.

All Bettas for auction will start at $1 Sunday at 2 p.m.

Artists hold spring lunch

The Palette Guild will host a spring luncheon Tuesday, May 20 in Farmington Hills Country Club. Installation of new officers will follow the salad lunch.

The 1975-76 guild officers are Arline Mozer, president; Lillian Baxter, vice president; Kay Leman of Livonia, recording secretary; Jo Griffing of Livonia, corresponding secretary, and Helen Godwin, treasurer.

The program will feature Elinor K. Rose, writer of a syndicated light prose feature for daily newspapers. Her work has appeared in Reader's Digest, Good Housekeeping, McCall's and other publications.

Family Y hosts benefit concert

The Livonia Family Y Campership Fund will present Angelo and Angela Primo in concert Sunday, May 18 for two shows in Churchill High School Auditorium, 8900 Newburgh Road Livonia. The matinee performance will be at 2 p.m. followed by a 7 p.m. show. Tickets are $1.50 for children and $2.50 for adults.

The concert is being staged in an effort to raise money to send needy youngsters to camp this summer. Tickets may be purchased in the Family Y, 14255 Stark Road, Livonia.

Also appearing will be Uncle Russ and the Rubber Band Company and Erik from the television show "Hot Fudge."

Arts program in Fair Lane

The Dearborn Community Arts Council presents the seventh annual "Evenings at Fair Lane." Friday and Saturday May 16 and 17 from 7:30 to 11 p.m.

The event includes a Saturday afternoon program from 1 to 4 p.m. with a guided tour of the historic mansion, grounds and nature trails.

Fair Lane, the former home of the late Henry and Clara Bryant Ford, is on the campus of the University of Michigan-Dearborn on Evergreen Road, south of Ford Road. Free parking is available.

The stately three-level mansion, provides an elegant showcase for the artists slated to perform. The variety of art will include music, from baroque to jazz; dance, from the classic ballet to the foot-stomping ethnic dances, drama, with excerpts from well known plays by theater groups; film making; writer's workshops, and exhibits.

The Stroller The price of water

Throughout the present controversy over the water rates in the various communities one question has been running through The Stroller's mind: "If you arose in the morning and turned the spigot in the bathroom or the kitchen and there was no water how much would you give to have the stream activated again?"

This question is running through the Stroller's mind, not because he has a desire to take sides in the debate between the City of Detroit and the suburbs, but because there have been times in his life in the suburbs when he turned the spigot and there was no water. And believe it, it is a sinking feeling.

The first such experience came some years ago when The Stroller and the little woman who runs our house, decided to build a home in the country-- at least that's how Livonia was referred to in those days.

We had some grand plans and were not a bit concerned when we were told that city water was not available.

"FINE," WE SAID, now we can have a well and a decorative wishing well in the yard just for atmosphere.

In due course we located a well driller and he started work at a spot we selected. Each morning The Stroller, like a kid with a new toy, visited the site and asked how things were going. And each morning the driller replied that he was making progress.

Then came a surprise--and a shock. One morning as The Stroller pulled into the road, he met the well driller coming out with all of his equipment.

"How's the water?" The Stroller asked and was shocked when the driller answered, "There isn't any. I'm down more than 200 feet and no sign of it. I don't want to take your money."

Stunned, The Stroller asked, "What will we do now?" "Well mister," the driller answered, "the next time you build a house get the water first. God puts it where he wants it, not where you want it."

Then he advised to excavate for a cistern to catch rain water for household use and bottle water for drinking.

That wasn't very encouraging to a fellow building a new home.

But the cistern was dug and on the way down the diggers struck three running springs. As luck would have it, we had the best water in the entire community.

LIKE IT ALWAYS DOES, however, luck has a way of running out and came the day when we got the real shocker.

It happened to be on a Labor Day and The Stroller and the lady of the house were hosting a party of friends in the yard.

Then, midway in the afternoon, came a plaintive cry from the kitchen, "There's no water. The well must have gone dry."

Sure enough, that's what happened. You can imagine the sinking feeling. No city water available... the well dry... and no place in the country to turn for relief.

There had to be some real adjusting. First, we had to get a large milk can like the farmers used to deliver the milk. We went to friends in the city and filled the can with water for drinking and household purposes.

For our baths we had to depend on the generosity of friends in the city for the use of their facilities. And on Monday mornings the Little Woman packed up the wash and took it to her mother's home. What a way of living! And without water!

At the depth of our despair, one of the neighbors had a great idea--why not rent a water wagon like they use to sprinkle streets, and then get permission to go to a fire hydrant. That way we can fill our cisterns each week.

Woman charged in arson fraud

CANTON—A 28-year-old Canton Township woman is free on $10,000 bond, charged with four counts of conspiracy to defraud insurance firms. A hearing in Wayne County Circuit Court is set for May 20.

Wayne County Sheriff youth bureau officer, Lt. Casmir Kurek, said Joan Ann Russell, of 39815 John Dr., was arrested following intensive investigation by the Wayne County Task Force.

She is charged with paying two juveniles to set fire to a storage shed on her property last Nov. 23 and then collecting insurance on the fire.

The two juveniles, the lieutenant

That was fine, too, until winter came. If you've ever seen firemen fight a blaze, in icy weather you'll have an idea of what we looked like.

IT DIDN'T TAKE VERY long until the fun of these Sunday morning water trips ended and we tired of the drudgery.

At long last, we appealed to the township board and were told that the bond issue was exhausted. We also were told that if we wanted city water we would have to pay cash to run the water line almost a quarter mile and then also pay cash to run the lines into our homes.

It was quite a cash outlay, especially for young folks in a new home. But The Stroller never will forget the morning, after that long winter, when he turned the spigot and out came a stream of sparkling water.

As we stood there looking at it, there were tears of joy in the little woman's eyes. As she said, "It sure is worth the price we had to pay for it."

It proved the truth of the old saying, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry."

Some thought ought to be given to this when you argue over the proposed water rate raise. "That crystal-like fluid is worth its weight in gold--especially when you don't have it."

said, are listed as co-conspirators and have been released to their parents.

At a pretrial examination Monday in 35th District Court, the woman stood mute on the charge, the lieutenant said.

Inspector Richard Novak of the Sheriff's department, said that with the rash of arsons across the country, his men, some of whom are assigned to the Wayne County Task Force, have been probing every fire in the area where arson is suspected.

'Equality....shall not be denied...on account of sex'

BY SHERRY KAHAN

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

"The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

"This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

This is the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. These are the words that have stirred up so much anger among women, and so many claims and counter-claims as to their true meaning.

"I really believe that it's men who are supporting the women who are opposing the ERA," said the chairwoman of the Monroe County Republican Party at a meeting at Schoolcraft College.

"Men are giving them funds to operate with and travel with," was how Mrs. Audrey Perry put it.

"If they were really homemakers and practicing what they preach about letting men dominate their lives, they would not be able to afford this themselves."

"As long as men give women money and time to continue the fight against women, men will continue to dominate the country."

IN A SPEECH sponsored by women's programs and services, Mrs. Perry addressed mainly issues raised by anti-ERA groups — restrooms, the military draft, Social Security, homosexual marriages, child support.

"ERA will not interfere with the constitutionally guaranteed right of privacy in public institutions," she said. "This applies to such places as public toilets and military barracks."

The possibility that women may be drafted because of the ERA is not the issue it was before the voluntary army came into being, she said.

"However, in the case of dire emergency, I don't believe that men are beneath women and should be killed first," she added.

"Congress has the right today to draft men and women on an equal basis if such an emergency arises. It doesn't take ERA to have a draft, nor does the amendment state it wants women to be drafted."

Mrs. Perry said she thought a change ERA might make in Social Security would be to allow a man to draw on his wife's benefits.

"Today, if the wife should die, her husband could not get benefits from her social security."

CONCERNING the possibility of the marriage of homosexuals, Mrs. Perry stated, "The ERA will have nothing to do with what determines the legality of a marriage: a state does."

"Social value systems are changing" but not because of ERA."

Alimony, child support and custody of children have provided the basis for many an argument between ERA opponents and supporters.

Mrs. Perry noted that "in a divorce the same principles of need and ability to pay will apply to alimony and child support as now apply."

She added: "ERA will require that men be eligible for alimony under the same conditions as women. This will be more fair to men."

ERA will require both spouses in a divided family to contribute equally, within their means, to support their children. At present only 38 per cent of fathers make full child support payments one year after the decree, she said, quoting an ERA pamphlet.

THOSE AGAINST ERA claim that if it "becomes the 27th amendment to the U.S. Constitution, all laws which say the husband must support his wife and children could become unconstitutional."

This statement was made recently by Mrs. Jay Glover, president of Livonia Republican Women. It was included in a letter to state officials stating that her organization had voted overwhelmingly to request the Michigan Legislature to rescind its 1972 action supporting the Equal Rights Amendment.

"I was very upset by the action of the Republican women in voting to rescind the state's action in passing ERA," said Republican Mary Dumas, who attended the Schoolcraft meeting.

A member of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, Mrs. Dumas said board concerns had prevented her attending the meeting at which this action was taken.

Present, however, was Mrs. Elaine Donnelly, Michigan chairman of the National Stop ERA Committee, who spoke to the group.

"I think they waited until everyone had gone and then took a vote," said Mrs. Dumas. "I'm going to tell them how I feel."

IN THE SAME letter to state officials, Mrs. Glover further attacked the ERA.

"Equal rights for a Livonia WAC forced her to reside for two years in an all-male barracks — the subject of insults and derision," she wrote.

Confronted with that statement, Lt. Kathleen Metz, selection officer in the Detroit area for the Women's Army Corps said, "It sounds incredible and I find it hard to believe."

"Before last year all WAC companies were billeted together in WAC barracks. Lately the Army has begun to establish apartment-like quarters with women or groups of women having their own rooms. Men also live in these apartment buildings."

"But there is certainly no case where a woman would have to live with men in a big room in a World War II-type barracks."

"The Army has gone out of its way to be good to women in terms of accommodations. Any complaints about housing and other matters are carefully considered."

Woman's world used to be clearly defined. Now it has widened, but there are differences about the exact effect of a constitutional amendment designed to knock down old boundaries and limitations. A recent visitor to Schoolcraft sought to answer some of the questions.

Bias in hiring called worse threat than seniority

By MARGARET MILLER

Working women are threatened far more by time-rooted discriminatory practices than by organized labor's seniority system, says Olga Madar, a leading voice in both feminist and labor movements.

Ms. Madar, retired vice president of the United Auto Workers and now chairperson of the Coalition of Union Women, was speaking at Henry Ford Community College as part of its International Women's Year series.

"There are those who say women are being laid off because of the seniority system," she told her student, faculty and community audience.

"I say those who talk that way have their facts mixed up," she declared.

"There are some 36 million women in the work force, and only about four million of them are organized. So far more are being laid off out of line of seniority than in line of seniority."

BUT MS. MADAR also addressed herself to the controversial questions of quotas—for women and minorities—and what she called "fictitious seniority," seniority rights for a worker who may have been discriminated against in the past.

"I have no hangups about quotas," she declared. "I come from the early fights against anti-semitism in hiring practices. Quotas have been used as a method of seeing to it that progress is made."

"I guess I take the position of Golda Meir, that in an equalitarian society the shame is not in using the quota system but in the fact that there is a need to do so."

IN SEEKING to correct injustice and move ahead, she said, "We should not move by taking anything from another individual whose fault it was not."

Instead, she insisted, "Those who perpetuated the system should be penalized." Thus there should be redress, she added, "when you can prove the seniority is less because there was an earlier discrimination."

"The real job we have to do," Ms. Madar stated, "is to take the seniority system, look at it and make some changes so that as people spend time on a job and acquire skills they also acquire seniority."

"But when you seek to destroy the seniority system you play the game of management and insurance companies."

RECENT VISIT to Washington as a member of the Women's Advisory Committee to the Secretary of Labor indicated, the speaker said, increased awareness among government officials that in the matter of employment for women "we have a helluva long way to go."

A speaker for the manpower department said there had been a good increase in female apprenticeships. Ms. Madar said, "The figure used was 3,800 more women receiving them. But when you look at the total number of apprenticeships, that comes to .008 per cent."

"So what looked like a tremendous amount of progress has to be reconsidered in the light of starting with zero achievement."

ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN in the labor force, Ms. Madar said, means "we have to take a look back, to school and family."

"Many women fail in examinations that would lead into apprenticeships and thus higher paying jobs," she added.

"But then we must realize that they are not encouraged to take, at the grade school and high school level, the classes that would get them into these programs."

"We must now really do the basic job of changing bad attitudes about jobs for men and women."

THE EQUAL RIGHTS Amendment, this long-time proponent said, will mean that "at long last our government will give a definite commitment to participating democracy and a free society as far as half of its members are concerned."

That's the important part about it, she declared, "but there will be some other impacts—some of the laws with regard to housing and credit, health coverage and social security will have to be changed to be fair."

"But we must realize," she added, "that it's a matter of utilization of all our human power as well as equality of opportunity for all."

"The Women's movement is a civil rights issue."

THE SPEAKER conceded that some time ago unions were in the forefront of the battle for protective legislation to cover working women.

"But what happened," she stated, "is that these laws were used, not to protect women, but to eliminate them from some jobs."

"Some of us saw what was happening and realized we should not oppose ERA."

"So the push now is for protection applicable to all workers, not just women. When there is a benefit in the protection, we say let it be extended. If it is against the worker, let it be rescinded."

Ms. Madar also insisted women must "continue to move forward in citizenship and political process."

Appointment of women to government posts, she said, must start at the top.

"There is a vacancy as under-secretary of labor," she said, "and I say it's time to appoint a female."

"I will say loudly and clearly to all concerned that if the president does not follow through on what he is saying about the equality of women, he cannot expect lower officials to take action."

In my years of writing commentaries about the life of one suburban family, I've had many people suggest it really is too bad we don't have any sons.

Just think, they point out, of all the fun situations I don't get to write about—the Cub Scout meetings, the Little League games, the car crazes and the school athletics.

And I have to admit there probably are some blank pages in our family experience book, though we wouldn't consider trading in any member of the cast of characters for the ones we've written.

BUT THIS SPRING a combination of circumstances brought an athlete to the family circle, and soon I hope to try out at least one of those up-to-now out-of-reach experiences.

A shortage of funds for athletics at our junior high and the new push for more participation in sports on the part of girls turned the school track team into a coeducational one, and guess who decided to go out?

(Maybe I should mention at this point that a major factor in our eighth-grader's decision to be an athlete was the fact that she's a bit deficient in cartwheel performance, and she thought that would work against her ambition to be a cheerleader.)

ANYWAY, A TRACKSTER she is, so now we're into school athletics after all these years.

The running speed hasn't picked up a great deal that I can notice, but the equipment is most interesting. Each week I wash a set of "sweats," the heavy shirt and pants that effectively disguise any tendency to feminine shape, and a red and white sleeveless shirt several sizes too large.

The shirt goes over a white blouse to wear to school the day of each meet, so I wash the blouse too. Why sports writers use the term thincleads I'll never know.

I GOT A GLIMPSE one afternoon of a practice session, but have yet to see one of the school's meets. Last week I was ready to watch our runner in action, but she turned up with a bruised ankle. (See, I'm learning about injured school athletes, too.)

I really expect to experience this thrill before the season and the school term is over. But I fear Cub Scouts and Little Leaguers will have to wait until another generation.

Food cooperative for unemployed planned by YWCA

Within a few weeks, 50 unemployed residents in the area around the Northwest Branch YWCA in Redford Township will find themselves in the grocery business.

The YWCA is founding a food co-op solely for the unemployed, with the first organizational meeting to take place Tuesday, May 20 at 1 p.m. at the YWCA, 25940 Grand River.

At the start only 50 families can be accepted. But names will be taken for a waiting list which will be used as the co-op is developed.

"THE PEOPLE who join will have to work," said Mrs. Ruth Duey, a YWCA staff member. "They will have to sign up as baggers, buyers, bookkeepers and baby sitters. Most of the work will be done on Monday morning when the weekly shipment comes in."

"The buyers, who will be specifically trained by us, will have to go down to the Eastern Market at 6 a.m. to buy fruit and produce and bring it back to a room in the Y."

"Then the baggers will place it in bags for the co-op members to pick up."

Each member will pay $4.25 a week in advance. The following week he will receive the fruit and produce selected by the co-op buyers. Because the co-op members will be doing all the work, prices will be considerably less than those in grocery stores.

MRS. DUEY noted that training for co-op members would begin with sessions about how it works and what jobs will have to be done.

"We'll be working on it all summer to train members to run it themselves," she said. "The co-op director will be Mrs. Bobbie Skovgard, who helped start a food co-op in Walled Lake."

Mrs. Skovgard is a former staff member of the Northwest Branch YWCA.

She advises that members must plan to donate at least four to six hours a month to plan the food buying and bagging of food. The group will do their own truck driving and cleaning up as well as the jobs already mentioned.

"Members have a ball," she said. "Besides saving money and becoming better organized in their food buying, they will learn to create new menus for unusual fruits and vegetables."

Having an unemployment card entitles a person to join. Registration fee is $1. Funds for co-op director will be supplied by the United Community Services, an arm of the United Foundation.

Smoking clinic coming

WELDON O. YAEGER will lead a three-session Smokers Survival Clinic May 19, 20 and 22 in Redford Baptist Church, Grand River at Seven Mile, Redford Township. The Michigan Cancer Foundation, Detroit West Unit, is sponsoring the free clinic. Each session begins at 7:30 p.m. and lasts two hours.

Environmental film planned

Lynn Balman of the East Michigan Environmental Action Council will lead a program for the Livonia Family Y Women's Club Thursday, May 15, from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. in the Y building, 14255 Stark.

Miss Balman, a Farmington resident, will show a film, "The Gift," narrated by Lorne Green and depicting problems involved in water pollution.

She also will offer environmental homemaking hints and will answer questions.

Refreshments and coffee will be served.

The program is open to all women interested. Tickets, costing 50 cents for members and $1 for non-members, may be purchased at the door. Babysitting will be available.

Plant talk

Information on growing indoor plants will be offered in a plant demonstration sponsored by the Western YW Nursery School Thursday, May 15 at 7 p.m. in Good Shepherd Reformed Church, 6500 N. Wayne, Westland.

A plant store representative will do the demonstration and will have plants for sale.

WHODUNIT?

The sofa, the chair, the stove and the dresses... all sold in a single day. Who could have gotten away with it? It's really not such a mystery. Every clue points to the Observer & Eccentric Classifieds: the quick response, the number of calls, and most important, the results-SALES.

Consider the opportunity... the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers are read twice each week by more than 155,500 families in Wayne and Oakland Counties - families next door to you and in neighboring communities.

Consider the motive... the Observer & Eccentric Want Ad Department has a strong desire to satisfy your needs, whether you're selling a couch or looking for a job.

Consider the weapon... the Observer & Eccentric Family Want Ads have a double edge because they're placed in two consecutive issues (Monday/Thursday or Thursday/Monday) and are seen each time by more than 155,500 witnesses. And these Family Want Ads (no changes in copy, no cancellations) cost only $6 - that's a savings to you of $2 off the regular cost of placing an ad in two issues.

It's a modus operandi that is well known and makes the solution to this case elementary.

Rochester's Finest New Home Community...

Coach Lamp Hills

MANY OF THESE HOMES QUALIFY FOR THE UP TO $2000 TAX CREDIT*

*If you purchase a home currently under construction before March 26, the recent U.S. Tax Cut Bill will allow an actual credit off your TOTAL 1975 Federal Income Tax of 5% up to a maximum of $2,000. Subject to clarification by the I.R.S.

COACH LAMP HILLS is located on the Old Sargeant's apple orchard originally settled in the early 1800's. The scenic, rolling countryside and farmland are reminiscent of northern Michigan. Two of Michigan's most popular cider mills are located nearby. Children attend the Rochester school system, long known for its excellence. Oakland Community College, Michigan Christian College, and Oakland University provide an outstanding opportunity for continued education. The Meadow Brook Center, including Meadow Brook Theatre, makes the community an admired cultural center. Several fine parks in the area offer year-round recreational activity. Thompson-Brown, the marketing representatives in Coach Lamp Hills, is working with four builders there, each providing his own design and professional touch to the homes he is constructing, giving each one character and doing away with the "look-alike" community. Four new models are open for viewing including the 1975 Award Winning Idea Home, The Williamsburg, a four-bedroom, 2 1/2 bath American classic colonial, featuring a large foyer, and huge master bedroom suite with large walk-in closet, private bath with shower, separate dressing room, and twin-door entry. Three other four-bedroom, 2 1/2 bath colonial homes are featured on "model row" - The Portsmouth, The Georgetown, and the Madison. A variety of colonial elevations and ranch home are also available. Coach Lamp Hills is located two miles north of Rochester, off Rochester Road, near the I-75 and M-59 expressways.

The Woods: Rated Adult Only

Frankly, living in The Woods is not kid stuff. Oh, not that they wouldn't enjoy it - with the magnificent clubhouse, year-round pool, landscaped walkways, and all. It's just that many adults prefer to live around other adults. Period. So we've planned a community for them - right in the heart of the most glorious natural state of native woods in this area. It's a sophisticated community, with excitingly designed condominium homes that reflect a contemporary view of life. A community with social overtones... where adults can relax and enjoy life undisturbed by the patter of tiny feet. If that's what you've been looking for, come to The Woods. And enjoy it.

SOUTH HILLS OF BLOOMFIELD

When you're condominium hunting you know how your heart beats just a trace faster when you drive into a community that looks good. "This may be you think. "The home we've been hoping to find." Then you walk in the front door and the leadown begins. Just more bland sameness.

And that's where South Hills differs from the rest. Architecturally pleasing, with interesting planes and angles, lots of wood, brick, and handomely used natural materials, its exterior beckons a warm welcome to owner and guest alike. But underneath it all you'll find more than you could have hoped for. Interiors that you didn't even know existed outside of glossy home magazines. Here a conversation pit surrounding a natural fireplace that looks like it was meant for cozy evening lectures. There a soaring, two-story livingroom with exotic balcony overlooking the woods.

And more. Custom features that we felt belonged in such an atmosphere. Exceptional sound condition. Walk-in closets. Central air conditioning. Attached garage with private, enclosed entry and electronically opened door. A large, private-walled patio. This combination of value and beauty, welcome anywhere. At these prices in this Bloomfield location it's a remarkable find! Find out for yourself. Soon.

Try something new

Plant a plant you've never seen. Plant a vegetable you've never eaten. Whether you try something new or not, see something new. There's a whole big green world to explore.

In the something-to-remember category, is lavender. This year we remembered the low growing dwarf 'Mumstead' lavender, planted it again and the scent was as delightful and flowers as deeply lavender as they were long ago.

You just might try the nasturtium, new or old, as an exotic vegetable. The lively, subtle, peppery taste of its leaves is reminiscent of watercress. Chopped leaves and flowers contribute to all types of salads. Flowers can be used as carriers of cheese mixtures, or salads for the hors d'oeuvres tray. The plump, green, unripened seed-pods, when pickled in vinegar, are very much like capers and are often substituted for them. Don't forget the cat. The friend of all felines in the family is the showy, low-spreading catnip. An excellent border plant that bears small fragrant lavender-blue flowers. Cats love it, but even a good roll in the catnip doesn't seem to damage the plant too much.

Plant a vegetable you've never eaten. Jerusalem Artichokes, salsify, shallots, leeks, parsnips? See pages 6-7.

Flowers/Vegetables

To many a gardener, the charm of a vegetable garden is in its orderly, straight rows.

There's a different kind of beauty in such flower and vegetable combinations as these:

A row of marigolds between rows of potatoes give a good contrast near harvest time.

'Salad Bowl' and 'Ruby' lettuce are beautiful with Iceland poppies.

Red chard and dwarf alyssum with the old King Alfred daffodils—it's spring again.

Yellow violas and parsley, mixed together and planted 10 inches apart make a lovely sight in the spring, with the yellow violas shooting up through the green mountain of parsley.

A groundcover of strawberries beneath an old apple tree.

The dainty blue flowers of the ground-covering myrtle, vinca minor with red-stalked rhubarb.

At your garden store

For the shopper for color in the garden there's always something new.

You can expect more shade-tolerant plants. The popularity of impatiens and coleus has brought on several new introductions by the commercial growers. The 'Carefree' coleus is a self-branching type which remains dwarf and bushy (with little summer pinching) the entire growing season. It takes shade or half-day sun and is an excellent houseplant.

The hybrid impatiens in the Elfin, Imp, Shadeglow, and Minette series have performed beautifully in lighting up shady areas with bright colors. Now comes the Ripple series with large star-patterned bicolor flowers. Also new is the large (2 inch) flowered Grande mixture on dwarf plants.

The All-America winner dahlia "Redskin" is a most welcome addition to the low-growing annual dahlias. Bushy, dwarf plants to 15 inches high provide a gaily colored mixture of double 1½ inch flowers with contrasting bronze leaves.

For early spring planting and for pots in the fall months the 1974 All-America selection dianthus "Magic Charms" in coral, crimson, pink, scarlet, white, or in a mixture, deserves space in the garden. You'll get a much longer period of bloom if seed heads are removed after flowers drop.

Another 1975 All-America winner is the 'Imperial Blue' pansy. This F₁ hybrid offers an extremely long flowering period. Its flowers are clear light blue with contrasting bluish violet face and gold eye.

Of the plants we used in hanging baskets last year our surprise was a little plant with the common name of creeping zinnia. Botanically its Sanvitalia procumbens. It bears tiny, golden-yellow, daisy-like blooms with dark centers; very free flowering. Its billowy, trailing habit makes it most attractive in hanging baskets. May be brought indoors in the fall.

Where to find it

New varieties of vegetables and flowers are seldom universally available. No one garden store or seed company catalog can find than the old favorite King Alfred but it still means daffodil to most gardeners. We have grown William the Silent (listed as "twice the size of King Alfred") with much satisfaction.

The miniature branching varieties such as Thalia, April Tears, Liberty Bells producing 2 to 4 dainty flowers on a single slender stem deserve special handling. They are beautifully at home in the rock garden of course, but we like to grow them in pots for close-up viewing.

Speaking of close-up viewing, the "bicolor" daffodil peeking through its leaves on our cover is Doris.

Growing bulbs in containers

If you want to concentrate your garden and enjoy spring-flowering bulbs even in the bleak winter months, consider the florists' method of forcing bulbs. The steps involved are quite simple:

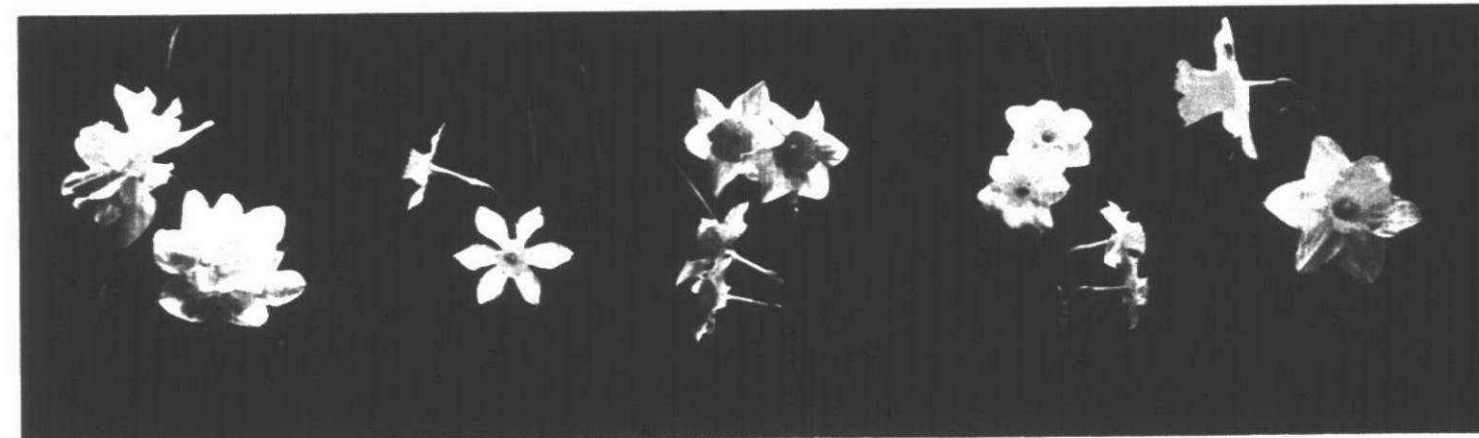

(1) Choose a container—clay pot, ceramic bowl or what-have-you that is at least twice as high as

In autumn think spring

The good gardener needs no urging when it comes to a free and generous use of spring flowering bulbs in the landscape. The more space you have the more dramatic their spring show can be. If you wish to try the unusual or choose special varieties the time to order bulbs from your garden store is in the spring for fall delivery. Only then can you be sure of getting what you want. Bulbs have the ability to produce as advertised in almost any soil but for best results add generous amounts of organic matter—compost, peat moss and the like—to the soil and work it in deeply. The first year the number and size of the flowers are set by the size of the bulb. You cannot change them by fertilizing. However, you can influence the leaf growth with fertilizer. Keep the leaves growing as long as you can. The more leaf growth, the more food is stored in the bulb for the next season's flowers.

Last year we indulged ourselves and planted more than two dozen varieties of daffodils. Most of them are carefully displayed in the daffodil gallery you see here. They come in all sizes and many graceful forms. As each variety came into flower we tried to analyze its beauty, compare it to other varieties and guess what the breeder had in mind when he created it. At the end of the season we concluded that every kind could win a place in our garden, somewhere.

Blessed with hundreds of daffodils we had the pleasure of using them in dozens of ways.

Our most successful plantings were where we used daffodils in unexpected situations. For example, a grouping of yellow and bicolor varieties in a ground cover of low-growing junipers.

Lettuce, especially the frilly 'Salad Bowl' and 'Green Ice' is beautiful with daffodils. A row of red chard and a row of daffodils gives the vegetable patch a touch of magic.

Planning combinations of daffodils and spring flowers or vegetables is one of the best fall pastimes. Some of the old-time surefire spring pictures are:

Yellow daffodils and blue pansies or blue violas.

White daffodils and red Darwin tulips.

The gray dusty miller and yellow daffodils get along beautifully together.

Since the bulbs are planted in October and the pansies, violas or other bulb ground covers are planted in the spring, it's best to mark where the bulbs are planted with a rock or short stake.

There are larger yellow daffodils space for the hundreds of old and new varieties. If you have trouble finding any vegetable or flower variety mentioned in this book, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reader's Service, Ortho Lawn and Garden Book, Chevron Chemical Company, 200 Bush Street, San Francisco, California 94104, and we will send you our "Where-to-find-it" list.

New vegetables

Since every home garden is an experiment station more or less, there should be room for a trial or two of the promising new varieties. Here follows our report on what's new with tomatoes, melons, peppers, and the oriental cabbages.

Tomatoes

Will another tomato variety produce more fruit than the one you grew last year? The choice is wide. Probably the most talked about new variety is 'Early Girl'. Its earliness—rated to set fruit in 45 days from setting out transplant—is one reason for its claim to fame. But unlike many early varieties, it continues to set fruit throughout the summer and fall.

Where the growing season is short, choose an early maturing variety. It requires less total heat and generally sets fruit at lower temperatures than mid-season or late varieties.

Tomato trials throughout the midwest and northern tier of states rate these varieties at the top of the list:

'Spring Giant' (65 days), Vigorous bush type. Verticillium and fusarium resistant. Good yield of 1½ pound fruits, if you're lucky.

'Springset' (67 days). A heavy yielding hybrid with resistance to both verticillium and fusarium wilt. Noted for its ability to set fruit in cool weather. Vine is vigorous, compact bush type.

'Campbell 1327' (69 days). Vigorous, fall bush type. Extra large fruit. Verticillium and fusarium resistant.

'Jet Star' (72 days). Big producer of large fruits free of cracks and scars. Vines are indeterminate in growth (fruit continues to set on new growth) and can be grown on stakes, trellis, wire cages, or on the ground. This hybrid is resistant to both verticillium and fusarium wilt.

'Better Boy' (72 days). Triple disease resistance. Yields continuous harvest of large, one pound fruits. Some gardeners harvest 50 pounds from one plant.

'Burpee VF' (72 days). A good producer of medium-sized fruits, thick-walled and meaty, with excellent crack resistance. Grow in wire cages.

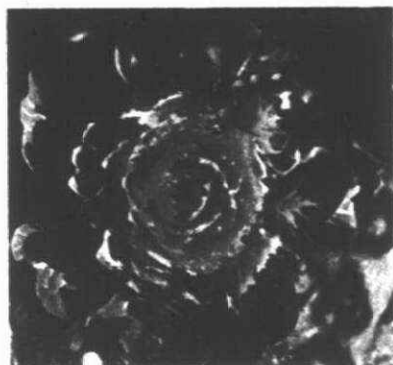

'Heinz 1350' (75 days). Resistant to both verticillium and fusarium wilt, and crack resistant. Vines are semi-determinant and grown on the ground.

'Sunray' (85 days). Yellow-orange, large, meaty tomatoes with sweet, mild flavor. A tall indeterminate grower generally grown on stakes, trellis, or wire cages.

Tomatoes in containers

There are a number of tomato varieties suitable for containers and hanging baskets. The smallest is 'Tiny Tim,' a 12-inch plant with cherry-sized fruits. The next in fruit size 'Small Fry' with 1-inch fruits. However, 'Small Fry' is a vigorous grower to 30 inches and should be staked or used in a hanging basket. It produces hundreds of fruit—8 to 10 in a cluster. 'Burpee Pixie Hybrid' grows 18 inches tall with clusters of 1¼ inch fruit. 'Presto Hybrid' is about 24 inches tall with high quality 1½ inch fruits. 'Patio Hybrid' is a step larger, growing to a sturdy, compact 30 inches, with 2-inch fruit.

All except 'Patio Hybrid' and 'Small Fry' are in scale with 6 to 8 inch pots. All bear quickly—60 to 70 days—and can be grown indoors as well as out. Give 'Patio Hybrid' a 12-inch or larger pot, or plant in the ground.

Flowering cabbage surprises with flowerlike leaves of many colors and patterns.

Edible-podded sugar peas

The edible-podded sugar pea or snow pea is a cool-season crop and should be planted in early spring as soon as the ground can be worked.

Pick when very young, just as the peas start to form. If you miss that stage, the peas can be shelled and eaten, but the pod will be tough.

In Oriental cookery the young pea pods are parboiled and used to garnish meat and fish dishes. They are also used in green salads after they have been allowed to cool. The most familiar dish that one usually finds pea pods in is mixed vegetables.

The low grower (24 inches) 'Dwarf Gray Sugar' can be grown without staking. The taller growers, 'Mammoth Melting Sugar' and 'Oregon Sugar Pod' are easier to pick if grown on a trellis.

The lettuces

Choice of varieties is all important. Lettuce is a cool-season, short-day crop. Some varieties are best planted in late winter, others produce as a fall crop.

There are four types of lettuce and several varieties of each type.

Crisphead. The crisphead types have firm heads and brittle texture. Such heads withstand long distance shipping and are the most important commercial type.

'Great Lakes 659' needs cool weather. May be bitter in hot weather. Plant for a fall crop in mild winter areas. 'Ithaca' is a non-bolting, tip burn resistant variety for spring and summer crops. Tends to break down in late fall weather.

Butterhead. The head is less firm and smaller than the crisphead. Leaves are soft and pliable, with a delicate buttery flavor. Leaves bruise and tear easily. Representative and choice varieties: 'Dark Green Boston' for very early planting; 'Summer Bibb' and 'Buttercrunch' as the slow-bolting types.

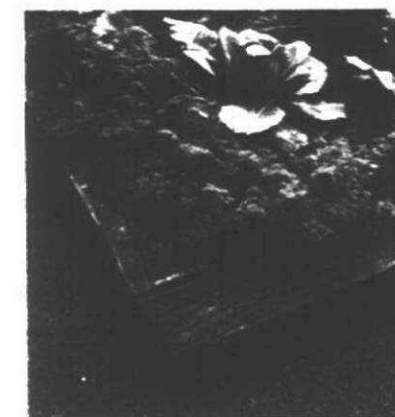

Looseleaf or bunching. They do not form heads. The leaves are clustered or pressed together and only the young leaves at the center of the plant overlap to an extent.

'Grand Rapids' and 'Prizehead' and 'Black-seeded Simpson' are recommended early varieties. 'Slobolt,' 'Salad Bowl' and 'Green Ice' are the more heat resistant varieties.

best answer. The soil raised above the ground level can be held in place with 1 or 2" boards, railroad ties, bricks or other building materials.

If the soil mixture in a raised bed is light-weight, drainage through the soil is good, and with the soil raised above ground level, drainage away from the bed is also possible. Unless the soil around the bed is flooded, the soil in the raised bed will never be water-logged. This can be a big advantage in spring, especially if the weather has been wet and cool, as the soil in a raised bed will warm up and be ready to plant weeks before regular garden soil can be seeded or worked.

Gardeners can also take advantage of beneficial microclimate conditions by planting crops on sloping ground. If there are no slopes in your yard you can create your own.

Railroad ties frame a raised bed of parsley and cabbage.

A southward tilt of the planting ground will increase the amount of sunlight the plants receive. A slant to the north has the opposite effect and creates an artificial cool climate.

And a well built raised bed can support a lot of extras. Side boards can be used to hold wire frames to keep out birds and cats, or plastic covers to increase warmth or protect from the frost.

Coldframes and hotbeds. Long-time gardeners and County Agricultural Agents are quick to recommend the use of coldframes and hot beds for home gardeners. Confined climates are one of a gardeners ways of outwitting the weather. In areas with short growing seasons gardeners can get a jump on the season by starting warm weather crops inside 'confined climates'.

A coldframe is a small greenhouse in principle. Structurally it is a bottomless, glass-covered box, heated only by the sun for the propagation, growing, and protection of plants.

The wooden box is of airtight construction, treated with wood preservative, painted, and sunk into the ground. Its hinged transparent window can be a stock coldframe sash (available from greenhouse supply firms), or an old window or glass door. (You can also build a polyethylene-film-covered frame.)

Fill the planting bed with layers of gravel, straw, sand, and soil. (See diagram.) Orient the coldframe to the south sun, on a well drained site. A fence or wall on the north side is excellent wind protection and reflects additional light and heat into the box. White or silver paint on the inside walls also reflect more light to the plants.

Equip the coldframe with a thermometer. When it reads above the optimum growing level, open the sash to permit air circulation to reduce it. Close it again when temperatures start to drop, to conserve radiation absorbed by the soil.

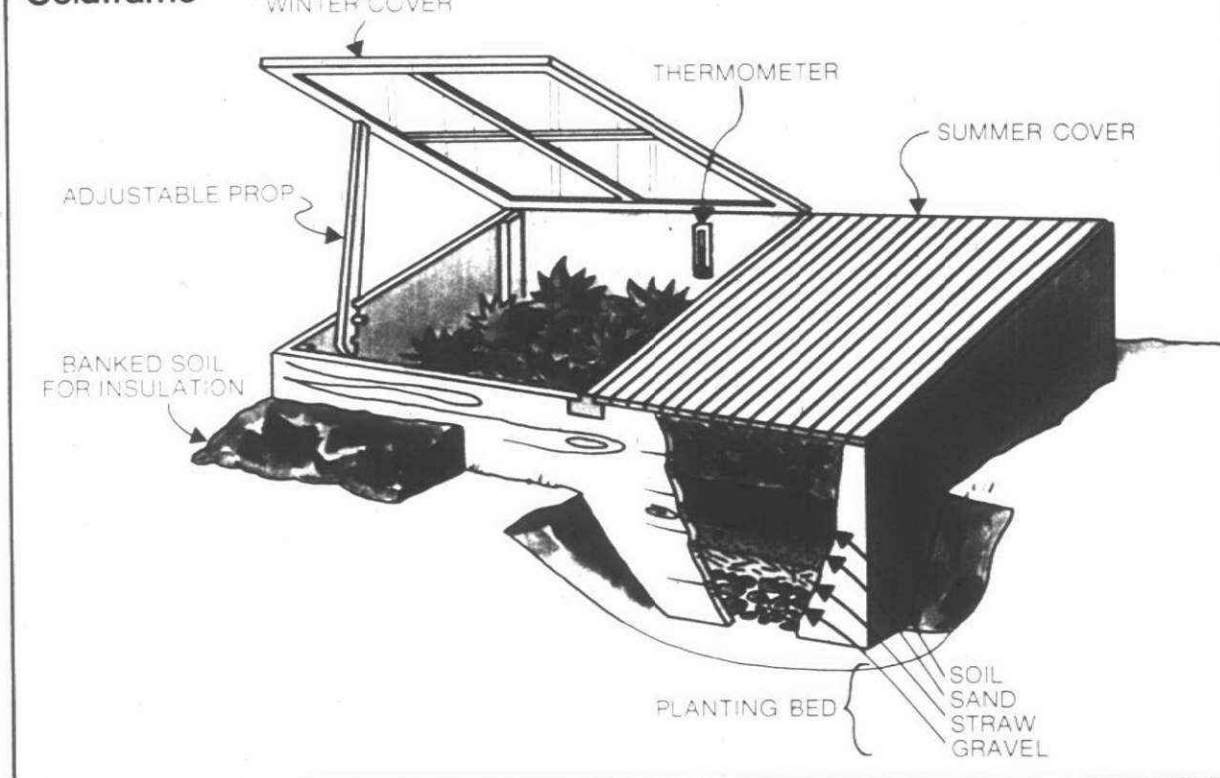

In cooler weather, insulate the outer sides of the box with banked soil or sawdust. Cover the top with sacks stuffed with straw or excelsior, wood planks, or other insulation during cold nights or chilly overcast weather.

During hot weather, solar radiation to the coldframe can be reduced by shading devices similar to those of a greenhouse. A mist spray can be used to humidify and cool the air.

In milder climates a coldframe provides frost protection and temperatures that keep plants growing through the winter.

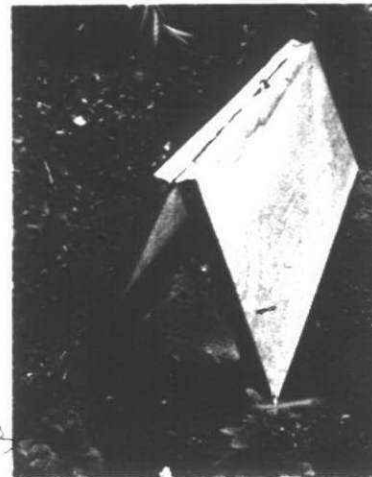

It will do the same in cold winter climates if a heating system is added, converting it to a hotbed. In earlier times a layer of fresh horse manure generated the heat, but today the usual source is an electric soil-heating cable. Incandescent lamp bulbs under the glass can also warm the box, but they are not as effective as heating cables.

little water go a long way is nothing new. But today home gardeners are hearing some new words about irrigation techniques and equipment—such as emitters, spot-spitters, Dew-Hose, Jumbo-oozers, Viaflow, Twin-wall, Drip-Eze are a few.

After years of testing in thousands of acres of orchards, row crops and nursery operations, the drip/trickle system of irrigation is being offered to the home gardener. The systems offered are not fool proof. Manufacturers are changing parts in the systems as more tests are made. But the potential advantages of drip irrigation in shrub and tree plantings, home orchards, vineyards and vegetable gardens are so great that the home garden experiment seems worthwhile.

The principle of drip/trickle irrigation is to supply the plant with an almost constant supply of water at a slow rate from a low pressure system. Depending on the type of system used, the water is either "spit," "dripped," "trickled" or "oozed" at the base of the plant or tree. No matter which system is used, drip/trickle irrigation uses less water in a more effective way than normal irrigation.

Frost protection. Many different plastic materials make excellent early season frost protection, but before using any kind of plastic for frost protection, be it plastic jugs or plastic film draped over an A-frame, there are a few things the gardener should know.

Where you use such early-season growing aids as row covers and plastic jugs is all important. In areas where temperatures are consistently cool such aids fulfill their function very well. But if you live in an area where a stretch of cool spring weather may be broken by temperatures equal to a hot summer day, the gardener may find a plastic covered plant cooked to death. Good ventilation is the key to avoid disaster. A row cover, with both ends open, should provide enough ventilation to allow the excessive heat to escape. If there is no ventilation through plastic covers of any kind, the gardener had best remove them on a warm day and replace them at night.

Raised beds. Gardeners who have been denied the luxury of a rich loamy soil have come up with a number of ways to combat the problem, and in doing so have found themselves with other advantages besides "good soil."

If the soil in your area is poor, growing plants above soil is the Cos or romaine. Long, narrow leaves form a loaf-shaped head. Leaves are coarse looking but are tender, sweet and mild flavored. Recommended varieties are 'Parris Island Cos,' and 'Dark Green Cos.'

The variety of lettuce which frustrates many a home gardener is the old 'Bibb' variety. You may know it as 'Limestone.' Lettuce buffs class it as highest in quality of all lettuce varieties. The plant is loose and spreading when young, compact when mature with leaves closely clustered to form a small round head. Leaves are thick and brittle, with a delicate buttery flavor.

'Bibb' became the name of a lettuce introduced into the U.S. about 1890 as 'Half Century.' A Major John Bibb, of Frankfort, Kentucky, is credited with popularizing this type of lettuce. 'Half Century' disappeared from the seed trade for a while and when it returned, it was called 'Bibb' and erroneously 'Limestone.'

It is said that the name 'Limestone' came from the fact that early growers found that it could be produced in the old limestone quarries of Kentucky.

The frustration in growing 'Bibb'/'Limestone' is its habit of bolting to seed prematurely unless its requirements for temperatures and day length are met. It is at its best as a fall crop or when grown in a cool greenhouse.

'Summer Bibb,' a cross between 'Bibb' and a slow bolting variety is the result of development work at Cornell University.

'Buttercrunch' is a more vigorous, larger 'Summer Bibb.' Neither of the slow bolting butterhead Bibbs equals the original 'Bibb' in quality, but they come very close and they are far easier to grow.

Flowering Cabbage/Kale

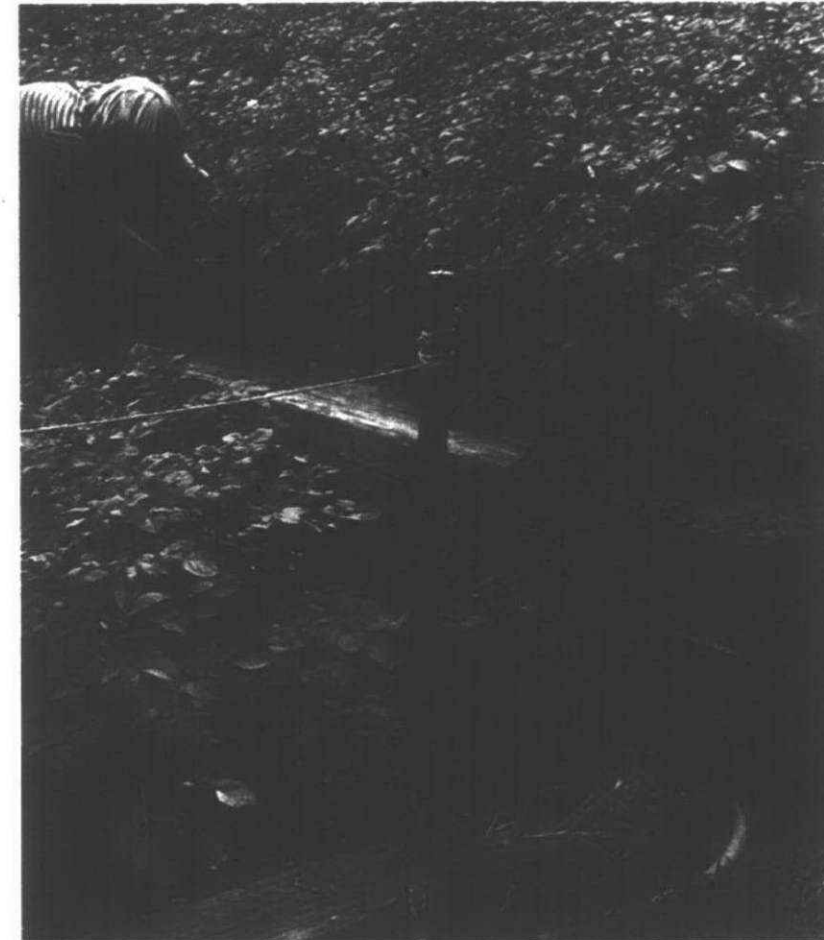

For fantastic color in the garden, and for a one-plant indoor bouquet in the fall, plant flowering cabbage or kale.

Wherever commercial growers have let gardeners see the plants you'll find transplants at your garden store about August 1. If these plants are not offered in your area, sow seeds in mid July.

Color and form varies plant by plant (see photos). They are more beautiful—colors are intensified when frosted.

of a giant peony flower. Leaves of flowering kale are heavily fringed and waved.

Finger food

A vegetable garden isn't complete without a quota of "impulse" vegetables—the pull-wash-munch kind. To the obvious choices of radishes, turnips and carrots we have added and highly recommend kohlrabi. It's good raw food and, chilled and sliced, it's a delight.

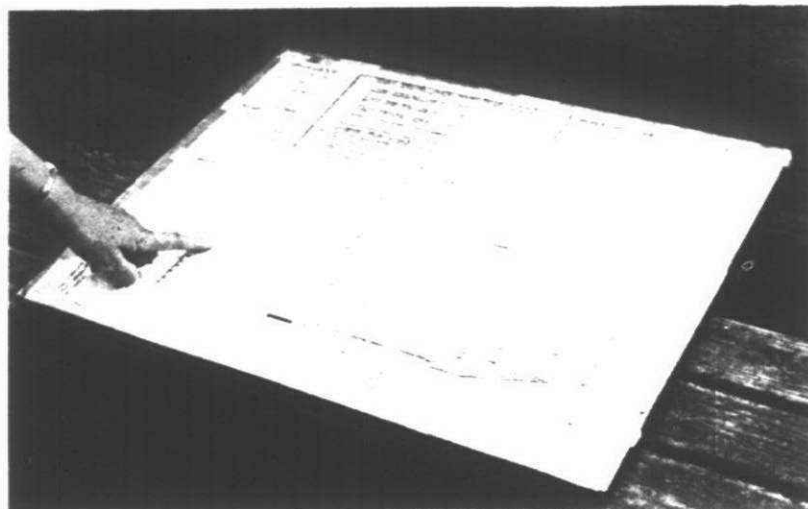

Kohlrabi is a cool season, fast-growing vegetable, taking only 55-60 days from seed to pulling size. Plant for successive harvests for both spring and fall crops. Harvest before it is mature—when bulb is about 2 inches in diameter. Woody stem fibers develop through the edible portion when fully developed. If you are planting turnips, give the variety 'Tokyo Cross' a trial. It's an All-America winner, with good resistance to disease. Best quality harvested when 2-inches in diameter, but will grow to 6 inches without becoming pithy.

NEVER ONE SQUARE FOOT OF IDLE GROUND

Here's how one family manages to produce a year's supply of vegetables—and have fun doing it.

The garden plot is 45 feet by 75 feet. The soil has been conditioned over the years with peat moss, lime and a yearly addition of compost.

The planning of the garden is a family affair—the family being the Sid Harkemas' of Grand Rapids, Michigan and their 5 children.

The planting plan fixed the location of each crop and the crop that followed.

Their growing season averages 170 days from the last frost in spring (May 1) to the first in fall (Oct. 17).

The eating season is 365 days—from harvest to harvest—thanks to a 27 cubic foot freezer and Mrs. Harkema's willingness to can 700 to 800 quarts of fruits and vegetables.

The high productivity, according to Sid, is the result of planned succession of crops—never one square foot of idle ground—optimum planting dates, maximum use of space and choice of variety.

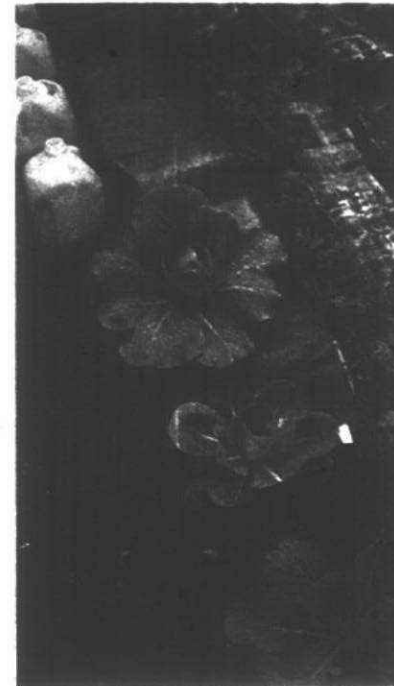

Sid told us: "I have a family of 5 children and since they help grow the vegetables they are also crazy about eating them. Every year we try some new varieties as well as our old favorites. All this takes a lot of space—more space than I have. For that reason I have worked out a double-cropping schedule (see chart above).

The first column is an alphabetical list of the vegetables that we are growing this year.

Column B is the optimum planting time. By optimum I mean two things: first, the best planting time as it fits into the schedule of the garden, and secondly, some vegetables such as beans can be planted as early as May 1, but the plants become stunted and do not yield as well as they would if they were planted a couple of weeks later. For that reason I have May 15th as the optimum time for planting beans.

Column C is the amount of lineal feet devoted to that particular vegetable. When we made up this list, my family and I sat down at the table and looked at past yields per foot of each row to determine how much space to allot to each vegetable.

Column D is used to indicate succession—whether or not the crop in that row is the first crop early season temperatures are less than ideal for warm weather crops such as melons, eggplant, peppers and summer squash, black polyethylene, used as a mulch, has built itself a solid reputation for increasing yields and speeding up vegetable ripening. Yields of muskmelons in experimental plots mulched with black plastic have been increased up to 4 times over that of non-mulched plants.

Common materials can provide growing climate modification—here newspaper, and tar paper for mulch; plastic jugs for early season frost protection.

When used as a mulch, black plastic increases the temperature of the soil. Researchers usually give this increase in soil temperatures credit for the remarkable speed up of growth, even though the increase is generally in the 3 to 6° range, sometimes only 2°.

The temperature of the black plastic soars high on a warm sunny day and kicks back a great deal of heat to the air above it, rather than transferring it to the soil. Insulating air pockets, between the plastic and the soil surface, retards much of the heat transfer from the black plastic to the soil.

When applying any plastic mulch, make sure that the soil is damp at the time of application so that there is sufficient moisture under the mulch for the mulch to retain. Dry soil should not be mulched unless there is ample water available to soak the beds after mulching.

Subsequent watering through plastic mulches is not a problem and the advent of drip irrigation systems will make watering under mulches a water-saving operation. Users of plastic mulches now take care of water needs by cutting upside-down T-slits in the plastic when watering with sprinklers, or running water through the planting holes, or laying a soaker hose under the plastic.

Clear plastic. Duane Hatch, Extension Agent in Eugene, Oregon brings some of the Oregon State University's research findings to the gardening public through the "Hatch Patch" demonstration garden. Experiments with clear plastic as a mulch in cool spring coastal areas have brought some impressive results:

"A layer of plastic over the soil aids greatly with warm season crops such as tomatoes, melons, peppers and squash. The warming of the soil will promote 10 to 14 days earlier maturity and higher yields with tomatoes. Melons, seeded about the 10th of June gave us ripe cantaloupe and watermelon by mid-September.

"We demonstrated that clear plastic is better than black plastic for our area because the sun's energy warms the soil rather than the top part of the plastic. The weeds were not a major problem under the clear plastic if temperatures of 90° or more occurred to burn off the weeds. In 1974 we aren't getting enough heat to burn off the weeds, and we have had to lift the plastic and do some hand weeding."

Organic mulches. The plastic mulches may have great advantages in increasing crop yields and in weed control, but they in no way deny the value of an organic mulch. Throughout the garden an organic mulch will benefit plant growth in many ways and at the same time give the garden a well-groomed look.

Remember that the values of organic mulches are usually considered summertime values—reducing soil temperatures and water saving. Gardeners who use a yearround mulch in the vegetable garden find it necessary to pull back the mulch in early spring to allow the sun to warm the soil for early seeded crops.

An application of an organic mulch in early spring will slow up the natural warming of the soil as spring advances. As an insulating blanket it reduces solar radiation into the soil. As a result, frost hazards are greater with a mulched bed

Organic mulches may be peat moss, grass clippings, ground bark or some other natural material, but as the definition of "waste material" changes new mulches may appear to the gardener. If you look around you may find a waste product of agriculture that is peculiar to your area. And local agriculture by-products are usually less expensive than packaged and processed ones. Where grapes are pressed there is pomace. Where there's a cider mill there's apple pomace.

Reflective panels. A determined gardener will go to great lengths to harvest a crop. A prime example of the ingenuity of such gardeners is seen in the photograph on page 28. Intent upon growing corn in a very shaded back garden, this gardener constructed reflective panels to increase the amount of sunlight and direct it into the only available ground space he had. Tall hedges flanked both sides of the prospective corn patch and effectively blocked both the morning and afternoon sun. In the first experiment in 1973, aluminum foil was stapled to plastic and hung on the east and west sides of the planting area. The corn crop was perfect except in the rows next to the hedge. The next year reflective metalized plastic was glued to plywood panels and hinged to a wooden frame. The metalized plastic and the adjustable angle of reflective proved to be more efficient.

Drip/trickle irrigation. Especially in areas with limited water supplies, the idea of making a

The life of a commercial farmer revolves around the weather. When the farmer plants, when and how much he harvests, (or if he harvests at all) how much he irrigates, or whether or not he needs frost protection, all depend on the weather.

The home gardener confronts the weather on a smaller, more manageable scale. The small weathers clustered around every house and yard, technically called microclimates, will yield to a surprising number of modifications. And modifying the natural climate to protect or further the growth of vegetables is one of the most rewarding exercises in gardening.

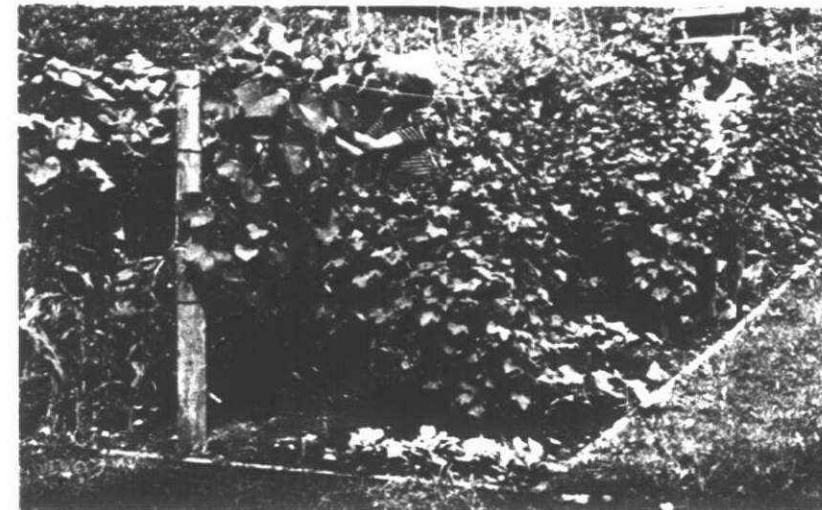

On the next four pages we've taken a look at home gardeners and university researchers who are bent upon making plants grow; providing the best possible environment for the best possible results. If their climate is extreme or deficient in some way, these gardeners modify it to better suit the plants' needs. The ways in which they have modified their climates should interest any fellow gardener.

Mulching is one of gardenings oldest techniques. The English word was probably derived from the German vernacular molsch, meaning soft and rotten. It is probable then, that the ancient mulch must have been a litter of straw that gardeners found kept the soil cool and moist. From the very beginning gardeners have used mulches as a means of modifying the growing environment of plants.

Dr. J. W. Courter, an Extension Specialist in Small Fruit and Vegetable Crops at the University of Illinois, and secretary of the National Association of Plastics in Agriculture, describes a mulch as "any substance such as straw, sawdust, plastic or paper spread on the ground to protect the roots of plants from heat, cold, drought, or to keep the fruit clean. Specifically, mulch modifies the soil and air microclimate in which a plant is growing."

A mulch, then, can be either organic or a manufactured material such as polyethylene film (plastic), aluminum foil or paper.

Succession of crops appears simple on paper. In the garden it becomes complicated when spacing of the crops differ in widths such as when lettuce is followed by cabbage or potatoes. Sid gets around that difficulty this way: "The rows in the garden are all 2 feet apart. I have these permanently marked off on the railroad ties that border the beds. I know that some crops require more than 24 inches of space. But by spacing them farther apart within the row I can usually make do. With the 2-foot wide beds throughout all crops are interchangeable. When the time comes to follow one crop with another I can plug in any type of crop.

"To make maximum use of space, all carrots, radishes, beets, parsnips, onions and the like are planted in double rows within the 2-foot space. Crops that should be planted in rows 30 to 36 inches apart are spaced further apart within the row.

"In some cases I will try to get 3 crops out of the same piece of ground. For example, an early crop of spinach comes off in June. It is followed with potatoes. Before the potatoes are harvested, a planting of kale goes between the potatoes which are harvested before the kale is mature.

"This close spacing has more advantages than increasing production. With the foliage of all plants touching there's a canopy above the soil. The need for weeding and hoeing is lessened. The foliage of the plants acts as a mulch. The vegetable garden is a thing of beauty."

Every gardener has his own idea of the best varieties. Sometimes it's based on production; sometimes on taste. Here are a few of Sid Harkema's comments:

Jerusalem artichokes. I never thought the family would like them, but they love those crazy looking knobby roots. The plant is hard to kill. Volunteers all over the place. This year we hope to produce about 100 pounds.

Beans. I try some new variety each year, but the one we stick with for a bush snap bean is 'Contender'. It produces a 6-inch long round pencil pod type and is extremely productive. On July 24 we finished picking our spring seeded crop. From a 200 foot row we harvested a total of 250 pounds. I always plant my main crop of beans on May 15 and harvest all the beans in 4 pickings, 4 days apart. This year the first harvest was July 12 and the last July 24. The kids have the most fun picking the last harvest. They can pull the plants out of the garden and sit on the picnic benches and pick the beans in the shade.

Carrots. I usually seed the main crop of carrots the first week of June. Even if you leave these in the ground all through fall into winter, they don't set seed and they stay sweet as honey. We prefer the 'Nantes' and 'Chantenay' types. We usually get about 300 to 350 pounds of carrots a year.

Celeriac. This is the first time for us this year. I don't know anything about it, except that it does wonders for soup.

Lettuce. We start the lettuce as early as possible in the spring and finish up as late as possible in the fall. Last fall I seeded the last patch about the first of August and covered it with a plastic-covered structure. We harvested lettuce up until the middle of December.

All photos on these pages are of the Sid Harkema vegetable garden. Sid says: "Some people think I spend all my time gardening. This is not so. My family and I draw up a map in early spring, write up a time schedule for each vegetable and then allow the garden to happen."

The space-saving vertical garden

As ground space for gardens gives way to the apartment balconies, decks, patios and roof tops, there's only one way to find growing space—go skyward, go vertical.

More than 10 years ago we began our search for more growing space in every square foot of ground space. Our starting point was a "Petunia Tree" we saw in Salt Lake City. All of our initial trials (see progress illustration in panel below) were with vertical gardens built in much the same manner as a wire hanging basket. The building materials were wire mesh, sphagnum moss, and light weight planter mix. Growth of plants in these "trees" was better than expected. We grew all kinds of lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers as "salad trees"; marigolds, alyssum, iberis, campanula and violas, gave the trees seasonal color. In the early days we over-scaled the units; there was no need for the amount of planter mix we used. The column we found most useful was the half circle of wire nailed or stapled to a 1 by 12-inch redwood board. Excellent growth of strawberries, vegetables and flowers occurred in half-circles of no more than 6 inches in diameter. In effect we took a 5-foot-long row of plants in a 12-inch mounded raised bed and stood it on end.

The size of the wire mesh was important. All were planted with transplants. Although the root ball can be squeezed through a very small opening, we soon used only hog wire or welded wire with 2-inch mesh.

There's action in drip irrigation equipment. One kit, manufactured by DuPont, is now available at retail outlets. The rotary mower becomes a lawn renovator and thatch remover, with an inexpensive (temporary) addition to the rotary blade.

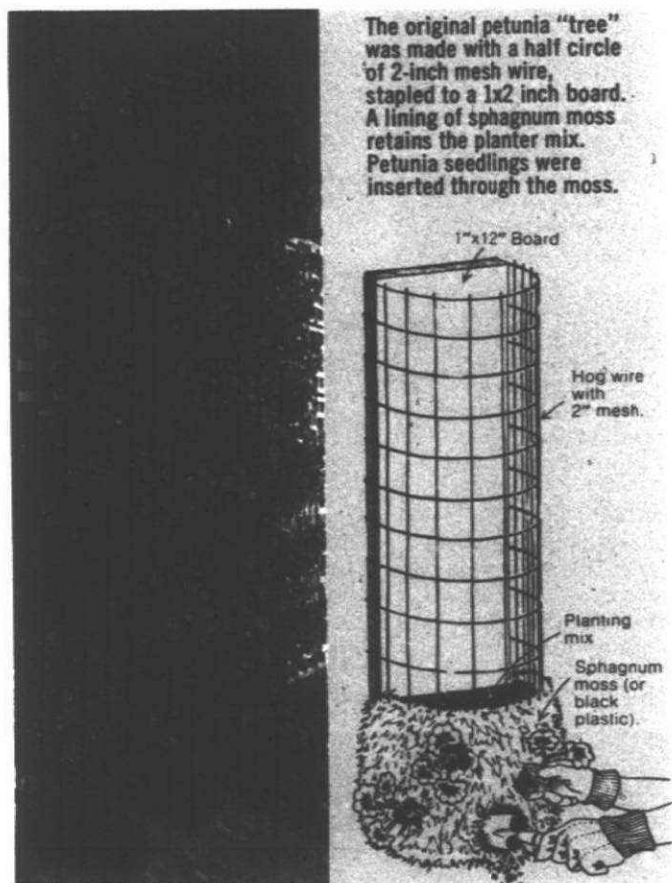

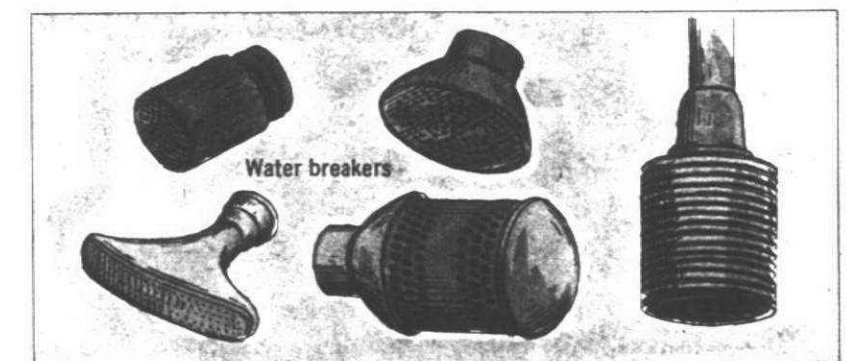

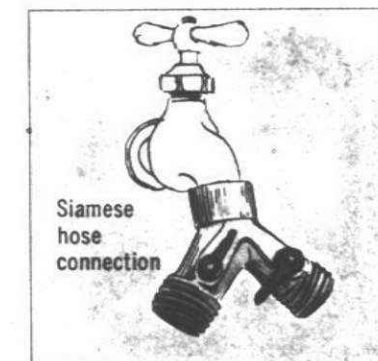

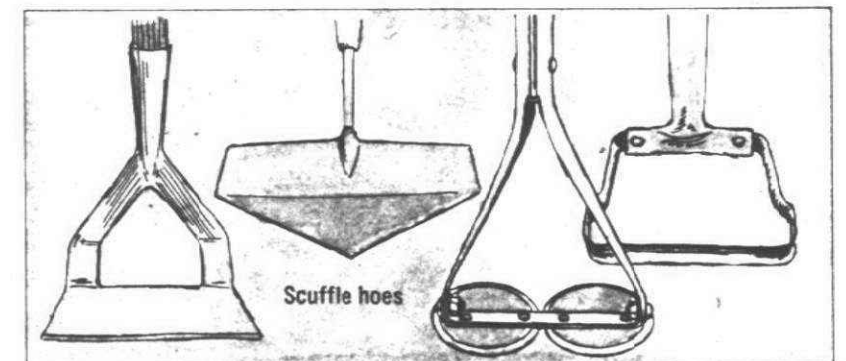

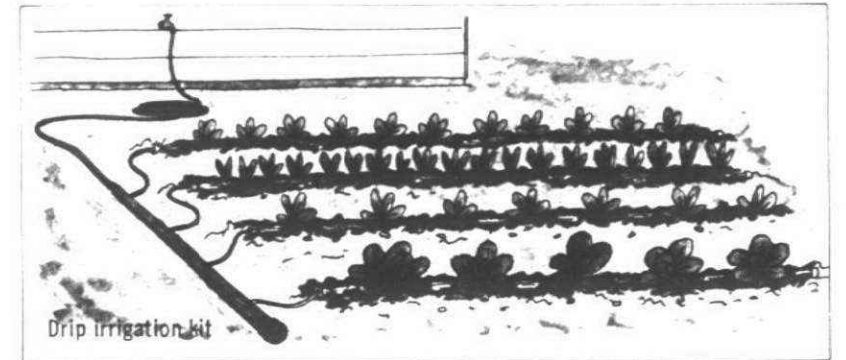

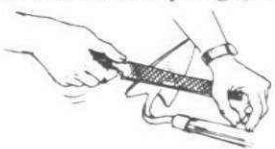

With the warnings against deep cultivation with the hoe and the resultant root chopping, more kinds of scuffle hoes are becoming popular. There are pointed scuffle hoes, hula hoes and pointed push hoes. Note that the Dutch type hoe can also be used as a lawn edger.

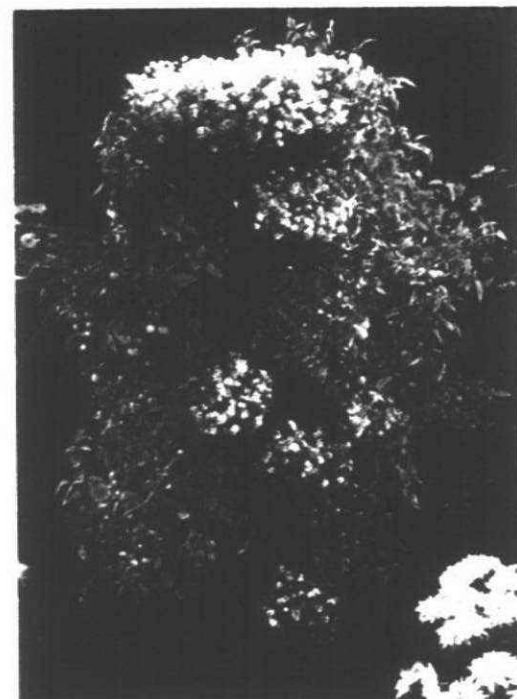

New and old devices find favor with the increasing use of soakers and drip irrigation systems. Siamese hose connector with double shutoff allows you to run combination hose and soakers, or hose and sprinkler. This gadget, as well as quick couplers saves many steps and hose bibb fiddling.

The little sweeper nozzles, with a force of water that will scale a fish, is one of our favorite gadgets. Equally necessary, in our opinion, is a variety of nozzles and water breakers with all types of spray patterns—mist spray, seedling nozzle and adjustable sprays.

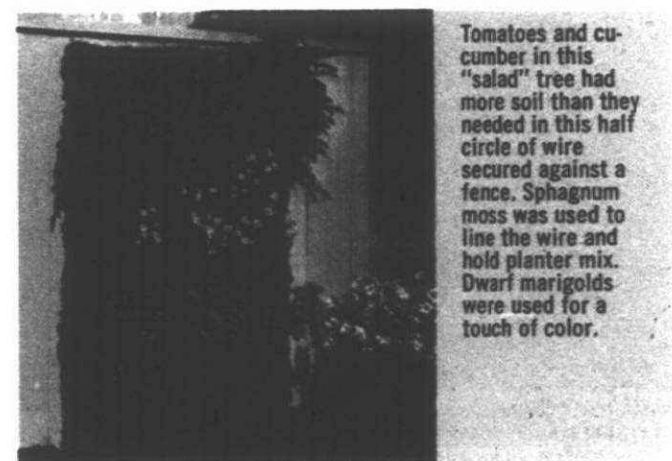

Anyway, my most useful gadget is a set of files to keep tools that should have a sharp edge, sharp.

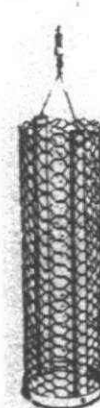

The original petunia "tree" was made with a half circle of 2-inch mesh wire, stapled to a 1x2 inch board. A lining of sphagnum moss retains the planter mix. Petunia seedlings were inserted through the moss.

Built of 2-inch mesh wire shaped as an octagon, faced on 4 sides with wood panels and cross braced. Lined with black plastic film and filled with planter mix. The tomato 'Small Fry' drapes from top. Alyssum planted both at top and inserted through the plastic at sides.

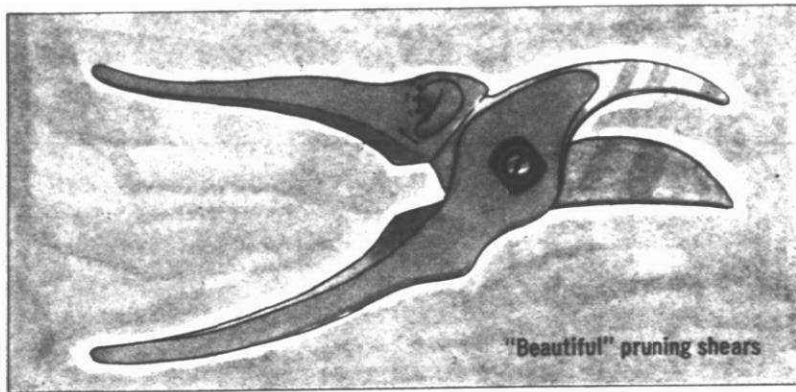

Tomatoes and cucumber in this "salad" tree had more soil than they needed in this half circle of wire secured against a fence. Sphagnum moss was used to line the wire and hold planter mix. Dwarf marigolds were used for a touch of color.

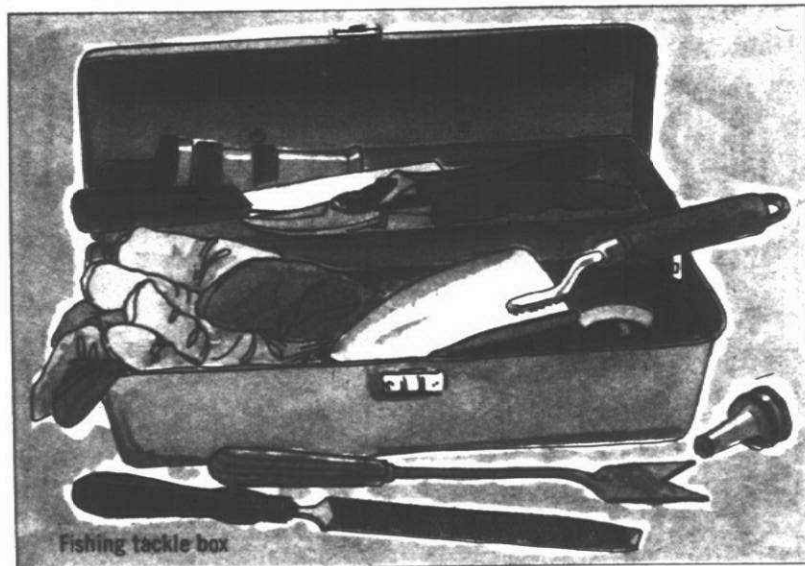

In early experiments cylinders of chicken wire with wooden slats and can bottoms for stiffening were used for hanging planters. Difficulty in planting through such a small-mesh wire ruled out chicken wire in subsequent trials. The fisherman's swivel was a success.

My most useful gadget

"Gadget" may be the wrong word for much of the equipment many gardeners find useful. The hoe and shovel can hardly be called gadgets. We use this good gardening word to suggest that there are many garden toys that add to the gardening experience. Sometimes a garden tool will change one's personality. A gardener we know has a very beautiful pair of pruning shears, he carries them in a leather scabbard, they are the best money can buy. The shears are his gardening companion. He enjoys training plants in espalier fashion. His beautiful shears have made him a garden sculptor.

Then, there are the inventive gardeners. Many a popular manufactured gadget has had its beginning in the home garden. They are the gardeners who analyze every garden operation in the light of how to make it more efficient. He doesn't drag the hose into the flower bed more than twice. First he uses a few stakes in the right places to protect the corners of the bed. And then, he improves on the stakes and we have the hose guides.

Perhaps you've met the gardener who enjoys using products not intended for the garden. He finds that the old-fashioned ice cream scoop is useful in setting out transplants; a putty knife is a good weeder in small spaces; a fishing tackle box as a carry-all for trowel, weeder, shears, nylon cord, plastic tape and assorted small gardening items.

Manufacturers of garden equipment have never been busier. Battery power gives cordless mobility to grass shears, hedge

In the evolution of column vertical gardens we changed from sphagnum moss to black plastic film to hold the soil mix. And we became choosy about the soil mix. Only a light-weight mixture of peat moss and vermiculite or perlite, such as the U.C. or Cornell "Peat-lite" mixes were used.

The black film is not as gardenesque as sphagnum moss but the plants soon cover the plastic and we seem to get earlier growth as compared to the sphagnum vertical garden.

In the last 2 years we have experimented with the vertical box as photographed below. In early spring the box is planted with lettuce—leaf lettuce, butterhead and romaine. In the summer, the box is planted with fibrous begonias, impatiens and coleus.

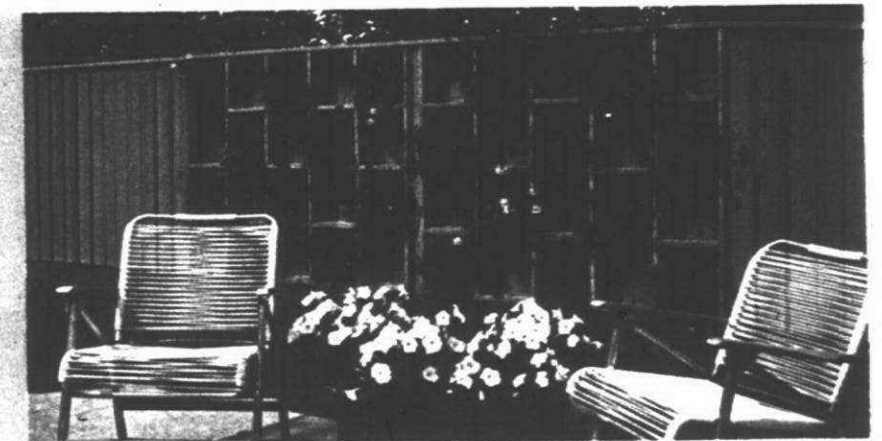

The box could be any height. We made it 50 inches high. Cross pieces are 1 by 2 inch with openings 8 inches square. Details of construction are diagrammed below.

The pipe for watering is 1 1/4 inch plastic pipe with 1/4 inch holes drilled throughout the pipe. This method of watering may not be necessary but we found watering without them too much of a guess between "too much" and "not enough" for thorough wetting. Regardless, the mix should be moist when filling the box. And no matter how light the mix, water at 8.3 pounds per gallon gives the box plenty of weight as it is watered.

The wheels used to give the box easy portability should be large casters which turn 360 degrees.

Best growing medium in the limited depth of the checkerboard fence is sphagnum moss. Hold it in place with welded wire of 2x2 inch mesh.

Spring planting, in the roll around, of lettuce in variety was followed by a planting of impatiens and fibrous begonias.

About the chart

The insects most likely to cause trouble in the flower garden and the vegetable garden are paraded within these pages. Each pest is matched with the product or products to use for control. Note that some of the products in the Ornamentals Column are not to be used on vegetables. When vegetables are planted in flower or shrub border, choose a spray or dust that is listed for both ornamentals and vegetables. In using any garden chemicals, including those referred to in this book, please be sure to read the entire label carefully in order to obtain the most current use information and to avoid accidental misuse. Note the number of days you must allow between the last application of the product and the harvest of the vegetables. The number of days vary by product and crop.

For example, time lapse of ORTHO SEVIN Garden Dust: 0 to 3 days, except on leaf lettuce: 14 days. ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray: 0 to 7 days. ORTHO Tomato Vegetable Dust: 1 to 7 days, except on raspberries: 14 days. Observe all pre-harvest intervals listed on product labels.

A thing called chlorosis

Chlorosis—the lack of natural green color in the leaves—is a physiological disorder caused by one or more of several conditions. It occurs frequently in soils containing an excess of lime, since lime fixes iron in the soil and makes it unavailable to plants. However, the most common causes are the unfavorable growing conditions that occur in soils with or without excess lime—too much water in the soil due to poor drainage, overwatering, or prolonged rains; low soil temperatures in a cold spring.

Sod webworms prefer grass in a new lawn that is lush and thriving. They prefer sunny areas and seldom damage lawns in shade.

The larvae live in the thatch on the surface of the soil in small silken tunnels. They cut off grass blades just above the thatch line, pull them into their tunnels, and eat them. The close clipped grass appears as a brown patch about the size of a softball. If the infestation is heavy, large areas of grass may be damaged severely or destroyed in only a few days.

ORTHO Sod Webworm Control contains ASPON which is highly effective in controlling sod webworms and chinch bugs. One application will keep them out for at least 8 weeks. See label.

Grubs

Grubs damage turf by eating roots of grass plants about an inch below the surface of the soil. They are the larvae of several kinds of beetles that lay eggs in the lawn in summer. Although various sections of the country have their special beetles, the grubs (larvae) are similar in appearance and habits. The eggs laid in summer soon hatch into tiny grubs that feed lightly on grass roots until fall or early winter when they burrow deeper for the winter. When the soil warms up in spring they move into the top layer of soil and with big appetites feed on the new tender grass roots. They grow rapidly as they feed. Grubs usually lie in a curled position. They are whitish or grayish with brown heads and brown or black hind parts.

A few grubs per square foot can cut roots so completely that sections of the lawn can be lifted from the soil like a rug.

The best time to treat the lawn for grubs is in late summer or early fall. The grubs are small then and easily killed. This timing should prevent damage in spring. ORTHO-KLOR 44 Chlordane Spray or ORTHO-KLOR 74 Chlordane Spray are the products to use. Follow directions on the label. Remember that the grubs are below the soil surface. The spray must be carried into the soil by watering after treatment.

Lawn diseases

Before attempting any controls, it's important to be certain that your lawn is suffering from disease and not from pests or some other problem. One way to tell is to scrutinize the grass blades. As a rule, insect-chewed grass looks ragged or lopped off. Diseased blades (not dead yet) usually show some disfigurement—dark margins, straw-colored spots, dark blotches, bleached spots, shriveling, browning.

The diseases that you are most likely to encounter own a variety of names—leaf spot, foot rot, melting out, fading out, brown patch, dollar spot. It's not necessary it's practically impossible) to match names with disease. One product takes care of most, singly or in concert. It's ORTHO Dyrene Lawn Disease Control.

with ORTHO Dyrene Lawn Disease Control when first leaves are formed in spring, and continue at 10 to 14 day intervals until warm, dry weather comes. Other diseases—notably brown patch—come in summer. Prevent by spraying weekly during hot moist weather.

To prevent late winter and early spring damage of snow mold, spray once after the first killing frost. Repeat during a mid-winter thaw and again after snow melts in winter or early spring.

To help a lawn recover from any disease, mow the whole lawn, rake, fertilize, water well, then apply ORTHO Dyrene Lawn Disease Control at the "curative rate" given on the label. Repeat at least three more times at weekly intervals. Reseed dead patches.

ORTHO Spot Weed & Grass Killer

This pressurized container sends forth a foam that kills green vegetation. It doesn't sterilize soil or move in the ground, so you can use it near plants without endangering their roots. It will not harm trunks or shrubs or trees whose bark has turned brown. Use it for edging driveways, walks, patios and lawns.

One common group of diseases occurs mainly during cool wet spells in spring. Their names—melting out, leaf spot and zonate eye spot or dying out—pretty well describe their behavior. To protect against them, spray

ORNAMENTALS HOW TO CONTROL

Aphids have many ways of attracting the gardener's attention—the drip of honeydew and the black mold that grows on it, the curled leaf and the distorted bud. Controls: ISOTOX Insect Spray cleans them out on contact and gives the plant internal protection. The same internal protection is provided with a soil application of ORTHO Systemic Rose & Flower Care 6-12-4. These products kill on contact. ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray, ORTHO DIAZINON Insect Spray.

If leaves are stippled with yellow or brown spots, turn leaf over and look for mites or their eggs. Use a hand lens or tap leaves over a sheet of white paper to identify these small relatives of spiders. Mites that attack leafy plants become more active in hot weather. Those that damage conifers start in the cool of the spring. Controls: Clean out overwintering mites and their eggs on shrubs and trees with an early spring spray of VULCH Oil Spray. During the summer months, spray with ISOTOX Insect Spray or ORTHO DIAZINON Insect Spray.

The most destructive beetles are illustrated here. Damage varies from small holes in leaves to complete defoliation. Most are general feeders on both ornamentals and vegetables. Controls: When beetles or their leaf damage are seen, apply one of the following products: ISOTOX Insect Spray, ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray, ORTHO DIAZINON Insect Spray, ORTHO SEVIN Garden Spray, ORTHO Liquid SEVIN. Always check product labels and follow all directions and precautionary statements.

The bugs illustrated are general feeders through the flower garden. As true bugs suck plant juices, many inject a toxin that causes unsightly spots and wilting. Tarnished plant bugs lay dilapidated eggs. Four-lined plant bug makes fan, depressed circles in top leaves of chrysanthemums, galliardia. Controls: Spray with ISOTOX Insect Spray or ORTHO Malathion 50 Insect Spray.

This tiny insect can do considerable damage to azaleas, especially azaleas, rhododendrons, flowering quince, pyracantha, mountain laurel, Japanese plants, ash, and plane tree. Both adults and nymphs (young ones) hang out underneath leaves, sucking juice out. The result: upper sides of leaves lose color, look grayish, speckled or blotched. Underneath leaves you'll notice black specks of excrement. First eggs start hatching in May or June. Another big batch may come towards end of summer. Spray with ISOTOX Insect Spray before May 15; repeat every 3 weeks through summer. Be sure spray into underneath leaves.

Weevils are really just long-nosed beetles. Most common and destructive here is the black vine or false weevil. Most commonly attacked plants are yews, hemlock and rhododendrons. Both young and mature weevils damage plants. Larvae (white grubs) feed on roots, can girdle a trunk just below the soil line. Adults chew notches in leaves of rhododendrons and other broad-leaved plants, nibble on tips and sides of yews and other conifers. Adults are easier to kill than grubs. To get them as they come out of the soil, spray ground beneath plant with ORTHO-KLOR 44 Chlordane Spray or ORTHO-KLOR 74 Chlordane Spray around June 20 and again in early July. Check the label before use.

An illumination inventory of your house will probably reveal that there are many areas where you would like to have plants that are at the low end of the light scale. In many houses the only areas with light intensity above 250 foot candles are the window sills themselves. Except, of course where the direct sun shines in and abruptly pushes it up to 8,000 or more. 250 foot candles is about the same as the illumination 1-foot away from a 100 watt bulb in a reflector and 8,000 foot candles is great for the eggplant in your vegetable garden, but likely to cook your asparagus fern.

There are windows and windows

The flexibility of plant placement within a room will be dictated by the size and number of windows and the brightness of the walls. The light intensity very close to a small window will be very much the same as it is with a large window. However, as we move away from the small window the intensity decreases more rapidly. Ten feet away from a large window wall the light intensity may still be half as bright as it was 6 inches from the window, while 10 feet away from a typical casement window it may be less than 1/10 as bright as it was 6 inches from the window.

The light intensity fall-off as you move away from the immediate window area will be much less in a light painted room than it is in a dark one.

Where direct sunlight strikes the window, the use of a sheer white curtain will not only decrease the light intensity of the sunlit area, but it will also increase the intensity of light in the areas further away from the window. In a typical case using a white nylon net curtain which decreased the direct sunlight from 8,000 foot candles to 2,000 foot candles, the light five feet away from the window was increased from 125 foot candles to 250 foot candles.

South windows. If you have one or more large south windows that receive full winter sun for most of the day, you can:

Grow a small vegetable and herb garden all winter, even a big zucchini in a rolling tub.

Maintain a small avocado tree or citrus through the winter. Wheel it outside for the summer.

Keep a minimum maintenance garden of cacti and succulents. Force daffodils into bloom for Christmas.

Illumination requirements for plants

This chart was compiled from data from a number of different sources and is generally based on 12 hours a day of light at a fixed intensity. Those plants shown with ranges extending to 8000 foot candles will generally take some full sun. In window planting situations it is important to provide sufficient ventilation to prevent excessive heat build-up even with plants that can thrive on direct sun exposure.

Berry plants in bricks laid on sand developed more slowly than those in the plastic but produced a good crop and finally equaled the plastic mulched plants in vigor.

When you start from scratch don't miss the sights along the way

Growing vegetables and flowers from seed has its special rewards. There's high drama in the sprouting of many seeds. The seeds themselves have a special kind of beauty.

The author of the introduction to Seeds—the Yearbook of Agriculture 1961, Victor R. Boswell, had a good eye for seeds: "The details of the surface relief of many seeds are even more beautiful in design and precision than the mass of the seeds as a whole. Often you can find minute surface characters of surprising kinds. Surfaces that appear plain and smooth to the unaided eye may be revealed under a good hand lens to have beautiful textures.

"Surfaces may be grained or pebbled. They may have ridges like those of Doric columns. They may bear geometric patterns in tiny relief, forming hexagons, as in a comb of honey, or minute dimples may cover the surface. Some irregular surface patterns of surprising beauty sometimes appear under the lens. Surface may be a dull matter, or highly glossy, or anywhere in between. Last but not least in the beauty of seeds are their surface colors. They may be snow white or jet black. The color may be a single solid one, or two or more may be scattered about at random. Colors may form a definite pattern that is distinctive and characteristic of the species and variety. The colors may be almost any hue of the rainbow—reds, pinks, yellow, greens, purples—and shades of ivory, tan, brown, steely blue, and purplish black."

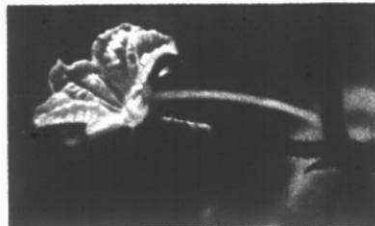

Starting from scratch with seeds should not be considered a job for experienced gardeners only. We watched a kindergarten class grow a dozen different plants from seed with the help of a teacher who was learning about plants along with the kids. The seed starter kits, the peat pots, and Jiffy 7's (see page 24) made the going easy.

The full story of our experiments with the green world and children of all ages is crammed into a book of 54 pages—A Child's Garden—A Guide for Parents and Teachers.

Books are available from Public Relations, Chevron Chemical Company, 200 Bush Street, San Francisco, CA 94104. The price is 50¢. Single copies free to teachers.

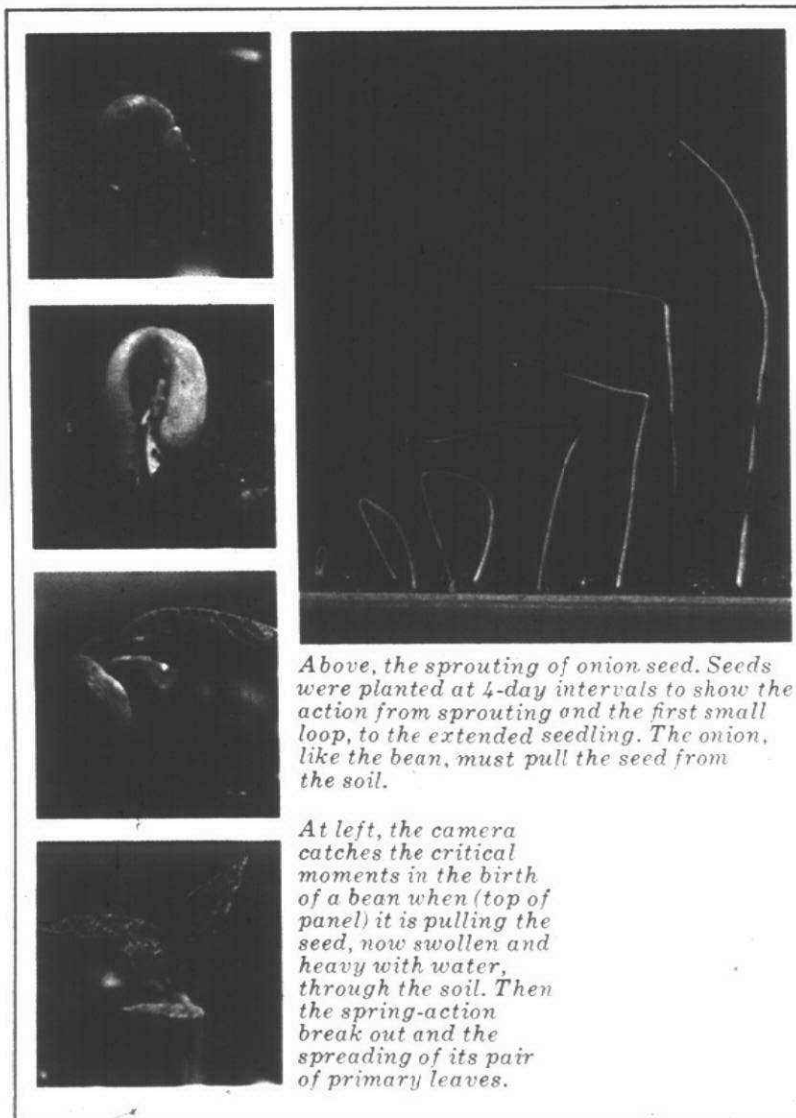

The kindergarten class at the St. Helena Elementary School grew plants of dianthus, peppers, tomatoes, squash, cucumbers, basil, dwarf and tall marigolds, dahlias and balsam, and staged a successful spring plant sale. See text.

where they receive their light from the sky. In fact, the light intensity in such an indoor situation may be more than twice as bright on an overcast or bright cloudy day, as it is on a clear day, when the illumination comes from a deep blue sky.

Luckily for those of us who provide the mobility for lots of pots, very few plants wither and die suddenly when light conditions aren't just right. Most will mark time for long periods in light considerably below optimum and thrive again when the right illumination is provided. With practice and observation we learn the places that our plants prefer by the reaction of the plants themselves.

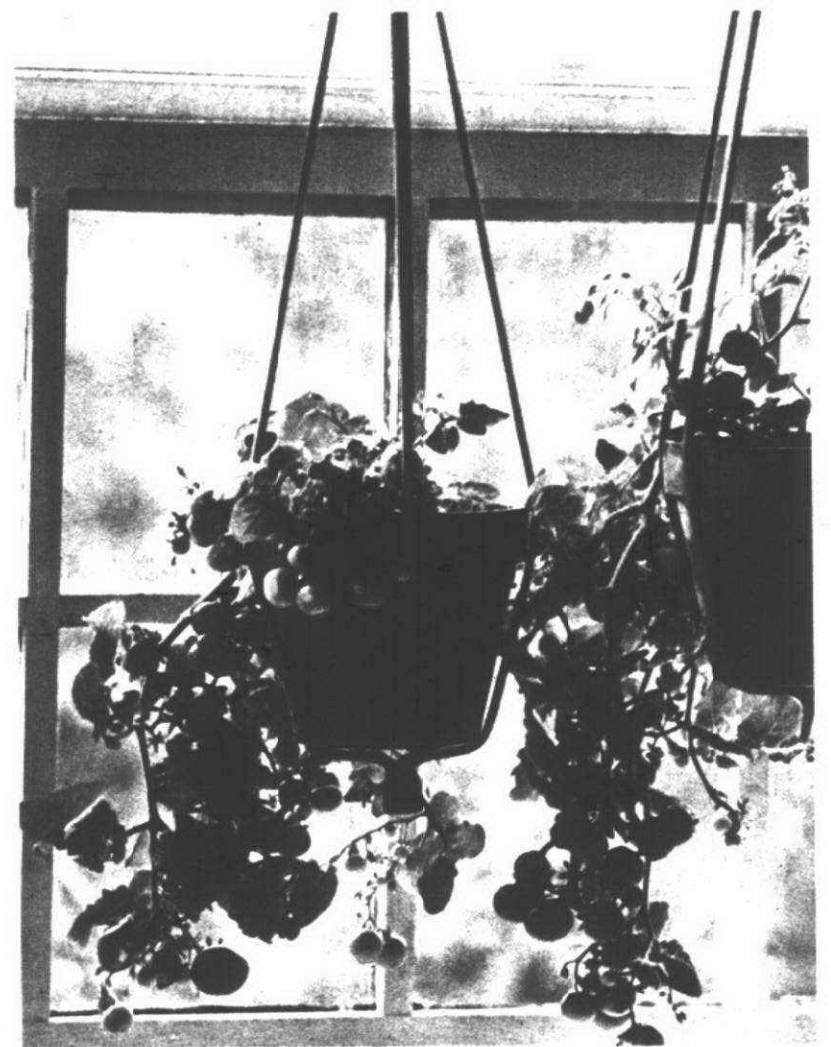

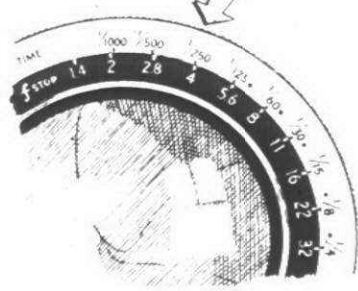

It is possible to shorten this trial and error process, if you know the light requirements of your plants. Many books, particularly those dealing with plant culture under artificial light, list the preferred light intensity range for many plants.

Photographic Light Meter Readings. If you have a photographic light meter that measures incident light directly in foot candles, it is easy to check the light intensity at various locations in and about your house. It is more likely that you have a meter or a camera with a built-in meter, that only gives you an exposure setting. In the latter case, if you set the film speed at ASA 100 and aim the meter at a white card placed to approximate the plant leaf surface position, the shutter speed reading (taken as a whole number) that will appear opposite f4 will correspond to the approximate foot candles of illumination; i.e. if the indicated exposure is 1/250 sec. at f4, this will be 250 foot candles.

never had a chance to sprout and grow. Weed seeds are everywhere. Sunlight shining on open moist ground makes weed seeds sprout. If, for any reason, grass becomes weak or sparse enough to create bare spots, weed seeds will surely sprout and grow there.

The no-weeds tactic then is to keep lawn grass growing vigorously—so thick there's no room for weeds to get a start. But even in the best of lawns, weed seeds may blow in, ride in with birds or on people's shoes. Pull or spot-kill broadleaf weeds with ORTHO WEED-B-GON Jet Weeder while weeds are small. If many weeds crop up, you'll want one of the larger-scale controls described here.

The broadleaf weeds. This group includes such all too familiar types as dandelions, plantain, knotweed.

The basic control for these and many other lawn weeds is ORTHO WEED-B-GON in its several forms. It can single out broadleaf weeds growing amongst grass, and without injuring the grass can kill the weeds from the tops down to the roots.

Spring is a good time to control the broadleaf weeds for two reasons: (1) The weeds are smaller and more vulnerable than later on. (2) The weed killers that control them are formulated to work best in cooler weather of spring and fall, not midsummer heat. Since the spring is also a good time to feed the grasses, it's the time to use the combination product: ORTHO Weed and Feed 25-3-7. This product encourages lawns to grow dense and crowd out weeds, and kills weeds already there.

Certain broad-leaf weeds—oxalis, chickweed, clover, English lawn daisy, prostrate spotted spurge—are easier to kill with ORTHO Chickweed & Clover Killer. It does the best job in early spring when temperatures stay low. That's when many weeds are just starting out and are most vulnerable.

Crab grass

Crab grass sprouts in spring. By early summer the weeds stand out as coarse, broad eyesores. They mature, bloom, set seeds by late summer, die in the fall.

To prevent crab grass, apply ORTHO Crab Grass Preventer Plus Lawn Food 19-3-3. This product lays a chemical barrier over the soil and kills sprouting seeds as they come up through it. Apply before weeds sprout. If you've missed the preventative treatment you can control already sprouted crab grass with ORTHO Crab Grass & Dandelion Killer. If possible, spray before the big surge of growth in late spring. The bigger weeds become, the harder they are to kill. In addition to crab grass and dandelion this product will wipe out plantain, knotweed, purslane and pennywort in bluegrass lawns. Check label for directions on other grasses.

To prevent crab grass from coming up along with spring-seeded lawns or in bare spots, use ORTHO Spring Seeding Crab Grass Control Plus Fertilizer 18-3-6. This prevents crab grass germination but doesn't interfere with lawn seed germination.

Poa annua (annual bluegrass); is a yellow-green grass with roots so shallow that large patches in your lawn turn brown and die with the first hot weather in summer. Use ORTHO Crab Grass Preventer Plus Lawn Food 19-3-3 in fall and follow up in late winter or early spring.

Sod webworms

The sod webworm spends the winter as a partially grown larva several inches deep in the soil. In spring it moves to the soil surface and begins feeding. By late June and early July adult moths emerge and soon begin to scatter eggs at random in the grass. The second generation which appears in late July and August cause the most damage.

The application of ORTHO Greenol Liquid Iron to the leaves and the soil of a chlorotic plant will help correct chlorosis. It is especially helpful where applied as new growth forms in the spring.

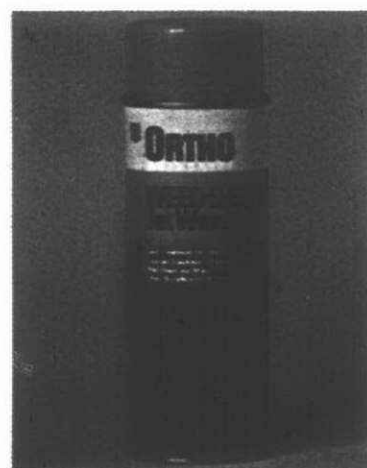

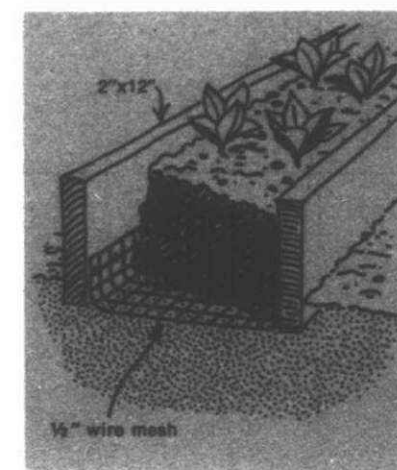

At winter's end

At winter's end the recovery of evergreen plants from the effects of a cold winter is painfully slow, especially if winter is followed by a cool spring. In the cold soils of early spring soil applied fertilizers are not directly available to the plant roots. Soil micro-organisms necessary to convert the fertilizers, are inactive. However, a foliage nutrient spray will supply nutrients immediately. The plant begins green growth before the roots are able to absorb nutrients from the soil. The product to use is ORTHO Evergreen & Azalea Food 10-8-7.

Two families of gophers practically ruined our garden last year. This year we have gopher-proofed one section by building a 12-inch deep raised bed and lining the bottom of the bed with 1/2-inch mesh wire.

Vegetable diseases

The very best way to avoid crop failure due to diseases, either soil borne or foliage diseases, is to plant disease resistant varieties.

When you choose a variety, whether as a transplant, in a seed packet or from a catalog, check what is said about disease resistance.

One of the reasons for the introductions of varieties, in tomatoes and cucumbers especially, is to provide disease resistance.

Some of the diseases that plague various vegetables are:

Tomatoes: fusarium, verticillium, and nematodes.

Cucumbers: scab, mosaic, downy mildew, powdery mildew.

Snap beans: mosaic, powdery mildew.

Cabbage: virus yellows.

Spinach: blight, blue mold, downy mildew, mosaic.

Melons: downy mildew, powdery mildew.

The occurrence of all diseases is not universal. You may be able to grow tomatoes or melons which have no disease resistance. But if you had trouble last year, switch to resistant varieties.

Read the label

For best results and safety read, and be sure you understand, the entire label before using any garden chemical and follow the directions faithfully.

With all pesticides the application is at least half the battle. You must spray both the upper and lower leaf surfaces as well as the soil around the base of the plant.

Never spray grass or any plant that is suffering from lack of moisture. Water deeply and thoroughly a few days before spraying. Wait a day or two after a period of strong wind so moisture lost from leaves can be replaced—leaves should be turgid. And, never spray when bark or leaves are wet from dew, rain, or sprinkling—you'll lose much of the spray's effectiveness.

Your own safety

Read the label every time you spray or dust and note especially all the cautions and warnings.

Mix sprays on a solid, level surface to avoid spillage.

exposed skin areas thoroughly with soap and water.

Do not eat or smoke while spraying. Wash hands thoroughly with soap and water immediately after spraying.

Keep all chemicals out of the reach of children. Store in a locked cabinet or on a high shelf. Set aside a special set of mixing tools, measuring spoons, and graduated measuring cup. Use them for mixing and measuring sprays only. Be sure to keep all chemicals in their original labeled containers at all times.

Don't store left-over spray. Any spray left over in the sprayer should be poured into a hole 18 inches deep and covered over.

Before disposing of empty pesticide containers they should be allowed to drain upside-down for at least 30 seconds; then rinse thoroughly with water three times, allowing 30 seconds for draining after each rinse. Used containers which have been rinsed and drained in this manner are ready for disposal by accepted local methods, such as crushing and burying or recycling when appropriate. Do not burn empty containers.

The right spray equipment

ORTHO water-powered sprayers are precision built to deliver the right mixture of spray at all times. The water pressure may vary from 20 to 80 pounds per square inch without changing the effectiveness of the spray.

ORTHO SPRAY-ETTE 4 delivers up to 4 gallons of spray—enough for 8-10 medium-sized shrubs or up to 800 square feet of lawn.

ORTHO Super Six SPRAY-ETTE delivers up to 6 gallons of spray —enough for 12-15 medium-sized shrubs or up to 1200 square feet of lawn.

ORTHO labels call for teaspoonfuls or tablespoonfuls per gallon of water. To fill the 6 gallon sprayer, use 6 times the gallon rate. Use 4 times the gallon rate for the SPRAY-ETTE 4. You can translate measurements with the table of equivalents.

Everything looks better with a well kept lawn

When the camera looks at a flower border or a shrub planting or even a vegetable garden, the photographs that win are the ones with some sort of lawn in them.

The options are as many as there are climates from Kansas, the southern parts of Missouri, and Indiana to the Canadian border and beyond. Here we go from the northern limits of the warm season grasses, through a mixed transition zone to the cold resistant varieties of the north. Most lawn makers are concerned with the bluegrasses, perennial ryes and fescues.

For a short course in how-to-know the grasses, we recommend reading the labels on grass seed mixtures. Changes are being made.

New turf-type ryegrass

Everywhere, except in the extreme North, the turf-type ryes are revolutionizing lawn seed mixtures. Not long ago the common ryegrasses were not looked upon as proper companions for the improved bluegrasses. They, the common perennial types, were and are found in the utility mixes and appreciated for their ability to out distance weeds and weedy grasses, in a new turf grass planting.

With the introduction of the turf-type perennial ryegrasses, notably 'Manhattan' and 'Penn-fine', a new chapter was written in the history of lawn seed mixtures. The new perennial ryegrasses were bred specifically for soft fibers, to provide clean cutting. When mowed, they do not have the frayed ends that give a turf containing common ryegrass a brownish cast.

In addition to their remarkable mowability, these ryegrasses have narrower leaves than the common ryegrass and blend well with the bluegrasses.

So today, when you read the label on the seed packages, don't be surprised if you find the new perennial ryes in the fine lawn mixtures.

And, the sowing of mixtures, rather than single varieties, are recognized even by the growers of the "improved" bluegrasses—such as 'Fylking', 'Pennstar', 'Galaxy', 'Baron', 'Glade', 'Adelphi', 'Sodco', 'Nugget', and many others. The new emphasis on mixtures does not detract from reputation of the improved bluegrasses, it simply acknowledges that we haven't yet found the grass that performs perfectly in all situations.

The seed mixtures offered may be for sun, or shade, or utility. The mixture varies by the packager, with varieties of improved bluegrasses, strains of common bluegrass, turf-type rye grass, Chewings fescue and red creeping fescue used in varying proportions. The proportion of the individual grasses in the mixture varies with the mixture's price and purpose.

Because soil, shade, temperatures and the willingness of the owner to care for the lawn's appearance vary by the individual site and owner, the mixtures make good sense. The lawn may not develop in the same mixture as shown on the package. The grasses best adapted to your situation will eventually take over.

How not to have lawn weeds

A lawn that is weedless is one in which the grass has grown so vigorously that weed seeds
